Speech 'empty, just empty,' says NDP leader

Bell-Irving reads speech

- Denticare push
- Energy studies
- B.C. to assume railway's debt

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

Premier Bennett ended speculation on the introduction of denticare Friday with the throne speech announcement that it would definitely be in place within the next fiscal year.

It was one of the few bright lights in the speech read by Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving and quickly branded "empty" by Opposition leader David Barrett.

"This government seems to be stumbling any time it tries to put something together," Barrett said. "This speech is empty, just empty. There is no continuity in it and no philosophy."

Bennett dismissed the criticism with a shrug. He indicated that Barrett had obviously failed to see the main thrust of the throne speech in the direction of energy and job-creating programs.

One of the moves promised in the speech will be the establishment of a research team to bring Hat Creek coal on stream as a producer of gasoline.

Up to now, all research on the Hat Creek coal deposits has been conducted by the National Coal Board of the United Kingdom.

"That meant the research really belonged to them," Bennett said. "When the new research team is established we shall be doing our own research, and the findings will belong to us."

The National Coal Board has already produced high-octane gasoline from the Hat Creek deposits but at too high a cost to make major production commercially viable.

The speech reminded MLAs that proven reserves of natural gas in B.C. now total seven trillion cubic feet, equal to more than 20 years of consumption at present levels.

There were promises of further development in the field of hydroelectric power generation.

"Our province today only harnesses one-third of its potential hydroelectric power," the speech stated. "The remaining two-thirds, roughly equivalent in energy potential to the total amount of oil British Columbia imports, rushes unused into the Pacific Ocean. Full consideration will be given to salvaging this huge energy source, but in such a way that it will not deminish our abundant salmon fisheries."

Outside the buildings, a group of students from universities and community colleges protested the proposed Cheakeye-Dunsmuir power line destined to bring more electric power to Vancouver Island.

As always, the speech contained only the bare bones of promises. The details will be disclosed only when the budget is introduced on March 10 or when specific legislation is brought down.

That means that municipalities will have to wait to find out what the throne speech means when it states that Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm "will lay a program before you which will afford our municipalities an opportunity to redevelop their downtown districts so that they may revitalize commerce and provide new sources of community pride."

Asked if he could "flesh the program out," Bennett declined.

Municipalities will also have to wait to find out what benefits are scheduled to come their way by virtue of changes in highway maintenance financing.

At present, only communities with populations of 30,000 or less can classify through-roads as a provincial responsibility.

The throne speech promises changes in the Highways Act to enable larger communities to establish provincial highways.

In Victoria that could mean the designation of Douglas and Blanshard as provincial highways, with the provincial government responsible for maintenance.

The speech also promised a major revamping of highways throughout the province with special emphasis on the north bank of the Fraser River and Vancouver Island.

MAGGIE SAILING? NO, NO, NO

Premier Bennett's reaction Friday to suggestions that the Princess Marguerite will sail again this year were terse.

Is the government considering putting the Marguerite back on the run for one more summer?

Answer: "No."

Is there any possibility that she will sail again under government colors?

"The answer is no."

Earlier, Transportation and Highways Minister Alex Fraser said he knew nothing of any negotiations going on in Seattle to let the Marguerite sail one more summer without sewage holding tanks.

"The government's position has not changed," he said. "The Marguerite will not be sailing this summer. If there is anyone in Seattle suggesting that she might, they are not my people."

Inquiry flays A-G's power

Canadian Press

The attorney-general's ministry has too much influence over provincial courts, and judges do not have the stature and confidence to fend off interference, an inquiry into the conduct of deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel has found.

"The provincial court is at once the court most subject to influence by the attorney-general's ministry and the court most in need of independence from that ministry," Mr. Justice Peter Seaton said in his report tabled Friday in the Legislature.

The judge found Vogel's conduct "inappropriate" in telephoning Judge Phil Govan of the Richmond family court to discuss a matter

Moslems reject hostages-UN parley

By United Press International

Moslem militants Friday harshly rejected any meeting between their 50 American hostages and the UN fact-finding commission to Iran, directly contradicting earlier assurances they would meet by the ruling Revolutionary Council.

The rejection suddenly threw into doubt the five-member panel's mission to end the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

"The students don't allow the commission to come here," a spokesman for the militants said in an interview by telephone from London. "It's only for show. That's what (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini says."

But in New York, UN spokesman Rudolf Stadjduhar, meeting with reporters after the militants issued their rejection, insisted the meeting would take place "soon," but he refused to specify a specific time or date. Following usual policy, he would not comment on the militants' rejection.

He said the commission of inquiry "has been informed by the Iranian authorities Thursday night that it will meet with the hostages," who were in their 118th day of captivity in the U.S. embassy.

Stadjduhar also announced Venezuelan diplomat Andres Aguilar, the commission member who flew home on private business earlier this week, would return to Iran on Sunday.

Tehran Radio, monitored in London, reported earlier that the Revolutionary Council had received the approval of Moslem militants for the meeting.

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter was not dissatisfied with UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's handling of the Iran crisis.

Powell made the comment in response to questions before the National Association of Broadcasters.

One questioner referred to reports in the Washington Post that Waldheim made "missteps" and "miscalculations" in dealing with the Iranian government on the commission's goals.

"The thrust of the story does not in any way convey the feeling of this administration," Powell said.

Also, a state department spokesman said the United States "fully supports the commission's work and we feel it can go forward with its mandate."

Both American officials and Waldheim insist the panel's mission was to seek an end to the Iranian-U.S. crisis, which Waldheim said specifically was to investigate Iranian complaints as well as to resolve the hostage issue.

Sauve breaks ground

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau announced Friday he has nominated former communications minister Jeanne Sauve to be the first woman Speaker of the House of Commons.

In his first public appointment since winning a 146-member majority government, Trudeau said that he had the assurance from defeated Prime Minister Joe Clark that he would second the nomination, ensuring Sauve's election as first woman speaker of the 282-seat chamber.

Sauve, 57, will replace Liberal MP James Jerome, who was appointed associate Chief Justice of the Federal Court of Canada.

First elected in the 1972 general election, Sauve was named federal science and technology minister by Trudeau.

In 1974, she was named environment minister and assumed the communications portfolio the following year.

A former broadcaster and journalist, Sauve attended the University of Ottawa before studying economics in London and French civilization at the University of Paris.

LONDON (AP) — Britain has formally handed the Soviet Union an outline of its proposal for a neutral Afghanistan and a quick withdrawal of Russian troops from the southwest Asian country, the British foreign office announced Friday.

Senior foreign office sources told reporters this followed "a number of signals" which the Russians have passed in recent days that they are genuinely interested in the British idea.

The plan was put forward by Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington at a meeting of the nine-country European common market foreign ministers in Rome on Feb. 19.

"The Soviet attitude is far from discouraging," one official said. "In fact, I would say we are rather encouraged by it."

But so far there has been no direct Soviet response, the sources noted.

U.S. Ambassador Kingman Brewster said Friday the Russians seemed to be making "conciliatory noises," but warned that "the real test is what they're willing to do, not what they're willing to say."

Interviewed by Independent Television News, Brewster said the United States was not "too encouraged" by the recent Soviet hints.

"I think it's hard to see anything done or said so far that would indicate that they would be willing to make an unambiguous total withdrawal of their troops from Afghanistan, which obviously is an absolutely essential part of any package," he noted.

Stressing that U.S. officials were "enormously supportive" of the British plan, Brewster cautioned that it must guarantee the Afghan people some say in what kind of government leads them.

British officials said they hope the Kremlin would make an official overture soon.

Sperm bank disclosure rekindles controversy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Disclosure of an exclusive sperm bank that offers the sperm of Nobel Prize winners to carefully selected women has rekindled the scientific and moral controversy sparked by genetic engineering movements before the Second World War.

Robert Graham, a 74-year-old retired Escondido businessman, said he established the sperm bank to produce exceptionally bright children.

But some scientists questioned on Friday were skeptical of Graham's methods.

"I think there are such serious probems in this kind of social manipulation that (there are) serious dangers involved," said Luigi Cavalli-Sforza, genetics professor at Stanford University. "Naive enthusiasm (in this area) has very often in the past caused some major tragedies."

He said that even the best humans carry some bad genes and legal problems are possible if an offspring of the program "turns out to be mentally deficient, which is entirely possible."

Graham said at least five Nobel laureates donated sperm.

Graham said there is no payment for donors nor charge to recipients.

Mediator urges amnesty for Chicago firefighters

CHICAGO (AP) — A three-point plan, including full amnesty for all firemen, was formally recommended Friday by a federal mediator in hopes of resolving the bitter 16-day-old strike by city firefighters.

Amnesty, a return to work by Sunday and a return to mediated bargaining were recommended by Edward McMahon, national office representative for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in Washington, D.C.

McMahon also urged city and the Chicago Fire Fighters Union officials to end the dispute.

He said federal mediators had spent much of the last four days talking with both parties and concluded: "We are now convinced that the negotiating process is hopelessly deadlocked and this strike may well continue indefinitely."

McMahon, however, also pointed out that officials for both sides disliked the plan.

If agreement was not reached on all issues after five days of bargaining, "we recommend that any remaining unresolved items be submitted to an arbitrator who is a member of the National Academy of Arbitrators," McMahon said.

Earlier Friday, the Illinois Supreme Court denied a request to free the union's leader from jail, while the city prepared to send disciplinary hearing notices to 280 strikers.

Charles Pounian, city personnel director, said the disciplinary notices would order the strikers to report for hearings before the personnel board beginning March 11. The strikers would be subject to suspension, demotion or dismissal, he said.

The city has already taken steps to fire five battalion chiefs. Hearings for them were scheduled for Friday but were continued and will be held within the next few weeks.

Pounian said strikers were being called in on a station-by-station basis as quickly as city attorneys can prepare charges against them.

The Supreme Court's ruling on the request to free union president Frank Muscare, jailed for defying a back-to-work order, came hours after about 500 firefighters demonstrating in front of the Conrad Hilton Hotel booed and jeered Senator Edward Kennedy as he arrived for a fund-raising breakfast attended by Mayor Jane Byrne.

On Thursday, firefighters who had walked out Feb. 14 to press demands for a written contract overwhelmingly rejected the city's offer of amnesty if they returned to work. Only one firefighter showed up by the deadline set by Fire Commissioner Richard Albrecht.

Muscare, president of the 4,350-member Chicago Firefighters Union, was sentenced on Feb. 21 to five months in Cook County Jail by Circuit Judge John Hechinger.

Four days earlier, Hechinger had imposed contempt-of-court fines totalling $40,000 a day on Muscare, the union and six other union leaders. Those fines have been ignored by the union and its leaders.

The state's high court gave no explanation in refusing to free Muscare. The request had been made Wednesday by Anthony Intini, Muscare's lawyer. Intini said he would appeal the decision.

Mrs. Byrne, who has refused to negotiate with the firefighters until they return to work, is a leading supporter of Democrat Kennedy in his presidential bid.

Influence hit

before him. However, Seaton recommended against any censure.

There is no evidence of sinister conduct or improper motive by anyone involved, Seaton said.

He was appointed July 5 after Govan complained in court that someone from the attorney-general's ministry had asked the chief judge to transfer him after he ruled the government did not have the constitutional power to enact the B.C. Family Relations Act.

"The suggestion was, and I draw the inference, a more complacent judge, compliant judge, would hear and make orders without entering upon this constitutional inquiry," Govan had said.

Vogel had then telephoned him and suggested he transfer himself elsewhere because his ruling was administratively inconvenient.

Seaton said Vogel had not selected his words carefully when presenting evidence to the inquiry and "it is unlikely that he would speak with greater precision on the telephone."

"Judge Govan might have drawn more from what was said than Mr. Vogel wished him to draw. I tend to view that that happened."

He said telephone calls of this nature were not appropriate.

"To use language, as I find he did, that caused the judge to be alarmed, was unfair to the judge and to the offices that the two of them occupied."

The justice said he found a number of communications between the court services division of the attorney-general's ministry and its prosecution division which were inappropriate, posing a threat to judicial independence.

The evolution of the provincial court as an independent court is not yet complete, Seaton said.

"It retains ties with the attorney-general's ministry that one might hope it will shed in the future."

He said there appears to be "little development of the independent court service that is essential to a truly independent court," and the attitude within the ministry is inconsistent with independence.

There must be a line drawn between judicial responsibilities and executive responsibilities, he added.

"Judges are not part of a government team. Their function is separate and distinct. Not infrequently they decide between government and individuals and they must not be associated with either.

"If a judge concludes as Judge Govan did that legislation is ultra vires, it is his duty to so declare regardless of the consequences to the ministry."

He said communications between judges and the ministry are unavoidable "but it must always be kept in mind that the judge has separate responsibilities."

The communications he termed inappropriate had not been made with evil intent but "even when made with the best of intentions such communications endanger the independence without which there cannot be justice."

Government officials and opposition critics were not available for comment.

Logger 'poor' after mishap

A 36-year-old logger was in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital Friday night after being evacuated by air from a remote forestry camp 40 miles northwest of Tahsis.

Werner Kruscamp, an employee of Freill Lake Logging Co., a contractor for the Tahsis Company, was crushed in a logging accident of undetermined origin earlier Friday.

Kruscamp was flown first to Tahsis hospital, where his condition was stabilized, before being flown to Victoria by Island Airlines about 1:45 p.m.

A spokesman at Victoria General Hospital said late Friday that Kruscamp was undergoing emergency surgery for multiple injuries.

An employee of the logging company at Fair Harbor, contacted by radio-telephone, declined to give any details of the accident. "Why don't you ask him (Kruscamp)?" he said. "I'm not going to tell you."

The RCMP at Tahsis were not notified of the accident.

One major government policy change "will be introduced to rationalize the financing of the B.C. Railway and put it on a basis that is consistent with the approach taken to the financing of provincial ferry services and the highway system."

The move, recommended by Auditor General Erma Morrison a year ago, means the government will assume the close to $700 million debt now held by the railway and regular subsidy to keep the railway in the black.

Barrett said the move was merely "a good bookkeeping move, but the people of B.C. still have to pay the bill."

There was a vague reference in the speech to the agriculture ministry expanding its mandate "to include a responsibility for the food industry."

Bennett declined to elaborate.

On the controversial matter of store openings on Sundays and holidays, the speech indicated that whatever decisions are made, will be made locally.

The speech states that Attorney-General Allan Williams will introduce a Holiday Shopping Act which "will place responsibility at the community level for determining restrictions in the operation of retail businesses on holidays."

The Colonist has learned that the new bill will give each municipality the right to decide its own shopping hours bylaws but that all statutory holidays and Sundays must be contained in any decisions they make.

In other words, the same rules will apply on all holidays and on every Sunday.

The throne speech also promised legislation to codify employment standards which include workers in the agricultural industry, to increase compensation for citizens injured in criminal actions, and an increase in benefits for chiropractic, naturopathic, physiotherapy and podiatric treatments.

On denticare, the speech was specific. "The dental care assistance program proposed by the minister of health last year, will be implemented later this fiscal year."

The reading of the speech followed the traditional opening ceremonies which saw the lieutenant-governor arrive to a 15-gun salute. This year's guard of honor, inspected by Bell-Irving, was from Royal Roads Military College.

Record turnout, calm mark Rhodesia elections

SALISBURY (AP) — Three days of parliamentary elections ended Friday in Rhodesia, Britain's last African colony, with a record turnout and a lull in political violence.

Under grey skies and in light rain—regarded as a good omen for the future—tens of thousands of blacks from cities, towns, villages and farms voted for a parliament with a black majority to govern the country they call Zimbabwe, an ancient African kingdom.

ELECTION OFFICIALS SAID that by the time polling places closed, more than 2,280,000 black men and women — almost 80 per cent of those eligible—had voted for candidates from nine political parties seeking 80 seats in the executive national assembly.

Results will be announced Tuesday and the British caretaker governor, Lord Soames, will ask the leader with the most votes to form a government. British sources said a coalition is likely since no party likely will capture an outright majority.

The three main black parties all said they may challenge the result when it is announced.

A 100-MEMBER ASSEMBLY was ordered under the London-sponsored agreement signed in December by guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe and by Bishop Abel Muzorewa, all blacks. White-minority rule ended in April when Muzorewa was chosen the country's first black prime minister in an election that attracted 64 per cent of the estimated voters, the largest turnout up to then, but excluded the guerrilla movements.

Twenty seats reserved for whites were won in an election earlier by the Rhodesian Front party headed by Ian Smith, prime minister during 15 years of white-minority rule.

"ORDERLY AND EFFICIENT," was how one Rhodesian official described the voting by guerrillas.

The three leading parties of Mugabe, Nkomo and Muzorewa have charged widespread intimidation and multiple voting.

Twelve blacks were sentenced Friday to three months in jail for trying to vote twice. The offences were made known amid allegations that a soft drink was used to remove the indelible dye placed on voters' hands in an effort to prevent persons from casting more than one ballot. It was not known to what extent voters attempted to remove the dye.

BRITISH ELECTIONS commissioner Sir John Boynton said he would look into the matter but said the effects would be "marginal" on the election results unless one party mobilized supporters to vote more than once.

Last five released

Guerrillas free women

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas occupying the Dominican ambassador's residence released their last five women hostages Friday, opening the way for negotiations with the government on freeing an estimated 40 men still held captive.

The men include U.S. ambassador Diego Asencio, Vatican delegate Angelo Acerbi and the heads of 12 other diplomatic missions.

FOREIGN MINISTER Diego Uribe sent a message to the guerrillas through Mexican ambassador Ricardo Galan, one of the hostages, laying down the government conditions for starting negotiations.

The government did not say what its conditions were and did not specify how the message was delivered but it was presumably given to Galan over the telephone.

More than 20 men and women guerrillas of the April 19th Movement took over the residence of Dominican ambassador Diogenes Mallol during a diplomatic reception Wednesday, seizing nearly 60 people.

THE GUERRILLAS are demanding the release of 311 jailed leftist comrades and payment of $50 million ransom for the release of the remaining hostages. They also want a guerrilla manifesto published in all major Colombian newspapers.

Three gunshots were heard shortly before noon, apparently coming from inside the plain two-storey ambassador's residence in a residential neighborhood on the west side of Bogota.

There was a flurry of movement among police and reporters at the sound of gunfire but no indiciation of major activity. The building has been cordoned by scores of soldiers and police with automatic weapons and an armored car.

ON THURSDAY, the guerrillas said they fired three warning shots at men in civilian clothes taking up sniper positions in adjoining buildings, presumably security agents.

Diplomatic sources said the government's main concern in working out a formula for negotiations with the guerrillas was to preserve the lives of the hostages. Representatives of the countries affected are co-operating in an attempt to find a solution to the problem, the sources said.

The last five women walked out of the embassy Friday morning and were taken to the military hospital for a checkup. All were in good condition but Costa Rican ambassador Maria Elena Chassou was admitted for observation because of the effects of two days without medication for an arthritic condition.

Bogota embassy seizure 'planned to last detail'

TORONTO (CP) — The guerrillas holding diplomatic hostages at the Dominican Republic's embassy in Bogota are anything but amateurs, says the man in charge of the Canadian embassy in Bogota.

"They're good," Paul Donohue said Friday in a telephone interview. "When they undertake an operation, they do it well."

Two years ago, he said, the group dug a tunnel to break into a government armory and steal 5,000 automatic weapons.

"The papers say it (the embassy seizure) was planned to the last detail."

The guerrillas, who belong to a group called M-19, seized the embassy on Wednesday. Those inside were attending a Dominican independence day reception and were taken hostage.

Donohue was to attend the reception but a meeting he was holding with Colombian government officials took longer than it was supposed to.

"I was supposed to go," the charge d'affaires said.

"But I was detained. By the time I got out it was too late to go."

The guerrillas are demanding $50 million, the release of 311 political prisoners and asylum in another country as a condition for releasing the hostages.

And although he said the taking of the hostages upset him, he said it hadn't affected the operation of the Canadian embassy.

He said there had been no increase in security for him and the 45 other employees of the Canadian embassy. Fifteen of them are Canadian.

He said he didn't think that he or the other embassy employees were in any danger and they hadn't considered leaving the country.

Donohue also said he did not believe there was any danger for the between 300 and 400 Canadians he estimated were in Colombia.

And he also doesn't think that the hostages—19 of whom are ambassadors—will be hurt, unless the government tried to use force to take over the embassy. About 40 hostages were being held.

U.S. expels 5 Soviet 'spies'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has quietly expelled five Soviet bloc diplomats in the last year for alleged spying activities, a top FBI official disclosed Friday.

William Cregar, chief of the FBI's intelligence division, declined to discuss details of the espionage, or to name the diplomats.

He said none of the Soviet-backed espionage attempts was believed to have caused a serious breach of the national security.

"We were monitoring them and we were able to prevent any damage," he said.

Cregar, in a chat with reporters on his last day before retirement, disclosed the State Department declared the diplomats persona non grata, allowing their immediate expulsion.

Cregar, who spent most of his 29 FBI years in counter-intelligence, said the incidents were kept secret because of "foreign policy considerations."

"Every time something like that happens, the enemy will manufacture a situation in their country to retaliate," he said.

U.S. officials say it is common for foreign intelligence agents to use diplomatic cover, which gives them immunity from prosecution, while conducting espionage activities. In those cases, the only recourses for the U.S. government are to attempt to monitor their activities or to expel them.

The West and the rest

The fact that federal political power is now based in Quebec and Ontario is by no means a new phenomenon. In the past this lop-sided situation has received general public acquiescence, especially if the party in power is returned with a majority.

But for how much longer? A democratic election allows each citizen to be involved in the process of government selection. But that alone is not enough. Those who have voted but are then denied representation in decision-making which affects the whole nation may well question our established — and so far workable — system.

The majority Liberal government dominates in Quebec and parts of Ontario but holds only 20 seats in the rest of Canada and none at all in three Western provinces. It is a situation far too serious to be sloughed off by Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau saying (as he has said before) that if the West wants a bigger say in Ottawa it had better elect more Liberal members of Parliament.

It would be far better if he now subscribed to the ideal expressed by his predecessor, former Liberal Prime Minister Lester Pearson, that all citizens "should have a fair and equal opportunity to participate in the national administration and to identify themselves with and feel at home in their own national capital."

For a man who makes much of identifying with the ideal of national unity, Mr. Trudeau might do worse than remember his own words of 1958 when he said: "Political authority (or power) exists only so far as men want to obey . . . this is not a matter of divine right, natural law or social contract . . . the value of government derives not from the promises it makes, from what it claims to be, or from what it alleges it is defending, but from what it achieves in practice . . ."

What all this means is that the ball is now in Mr. Trudeau's court, with the cohesion of the nation depending on how he plays it. If he flubs his shot both he and the whole country will regret his failure to keep his promise to retire.

The menu

A throne speech is like a menu — it makes tempting promises. Reality, like the dinner, comes a little later — with the budget.

The challenge in every such Opening Speech is to hack through the self-serving platitudes and discover meaningful morsels. It remains a highly speculative exercise.

Friday's speech touches lightly on a multitude of subjects. It reaffirms, for example, that the premier is a dedicated nationalist and a dissatisfied provincialist. It confirms that the province is mightily blessed with energy potential while its people remain cursed with inflation and unemployment.

Is there something which deserves particular note? Perhaps there is. Premier Bennett would persuade us, through the mouth of the Queen's representative, that his government intends to emphasize long-range economic planning. If that turns out to be so, it will be particularly welcome in the forest industry, our largest and most important provincial asset. Mounting evidence suggests there has been chronic over-cutting, harvesting of the resource at a pace much faster than efforts to renew it.

The government promises a new, long-term commitment to perpetual reforestation. One question: who will bear the financial burden of this essential step?

Forest renewal will possibly be the most important subject debated in the session. Half of our provincial economy turns on the forest industry. As matters stand, it is a diminishing resource. That is a trend which must be reversed.

A crucial crossroad for Mrs. Thatcher

Anthony Lejeune

LONDON — A fierce struggle is being waged for the soul of Britain's Conservative government.

Nine months after Mrs. Thatcher won the election, pledged to reverse the country's long slide into socialism, the going has begun to get rough — which was inevitable. No less inevitably, the fainthearts and sceptics are urging her to change course or at least to proceed more slowly.

"You are mad and we hate you!" a striking steelworker shouted at Sir Keith Joseph, the secretary of state for industry, who was then pelted with eggs and tomatoes. His alleged "madness" consists in a refusal, which Mrs. Thatcher thoroughly supports, to buy off the strike with more of the taxpayers' money.

That militant trade unionists should feel that way is perhaps understandable. (One of the dangers of widespread nationalization is that so many industrial disputes immediately become a trial of strength with the government.) More politically significant is the fact that a sizable group of other ministers in Mrs. Thatcher's cabinet are inclined to agree.

This too was predictable, because, in order (she hoped) to unify the Conservative party, she included many of the establishment-minded liberal-conservatives from previous administrations. The commentators are now dividing her cabinet into the "economists," meaning those who share her own monetarist free-market views, and the "politicals," meaning the habitual compromisers, who don't want to risk a confrontation with the unions or alienating too many voters with cuts in public expenditure.

This Conservative government was elected mainly to do three things — reduce taxes, check inflation and curb the unions.

A large majority of the British public strongly favors these objectives in theory. But they cannot be achieved without side-effects which are bound to produce cries of pain and howls of execration.

Taxes can be reduced and inflation checked only by making real cuts in government expenditure. That means that welfare services are liable to be squeezed, nationalized industries compelled to stand on their own feet, civil service jobs diminished and a lot of people deprived of their pickings from the pork barrel. Ministers and officials, who may approve of the general objective, nevertheless resist the policy as soon as it touches their own departments.

Union leaders, however much the government may "consult" them about changes in the law, will never tamely accept new limitations to their power. The militants are anyway spoiling for a fight.

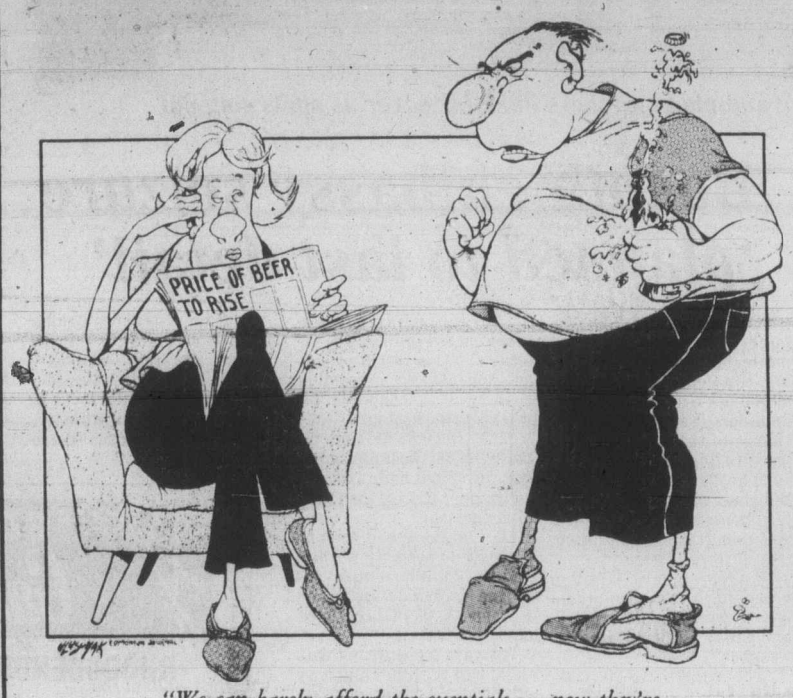
The government has a clear mandate to prevent intimidatory picketing, the injustices of the "closed shop" and the disruption of essential public services: but the "politicals" in the cabinet, including Jim Prior, the minister chiefly responsible for dealing with the unions, are afraid to tackle any of these issues head-on.

The half-measures which Mr. Prior is proposing would, his critics complain, anger the unions without effectively curbing them.

The cabinet and indeed the Conservative party is split, therefore, between those who would nail to the mast the flags of individual freedom and sound money and those who are broadly content with the collectivism and welfarism of recent years and want only to trim a little.

The press, on the whole, is urging Mrs. Thatcher to be tough, to cut public spending much more and to stop by whatever means may be necessary the present flagrant abuses of union power.

Just as Mrs. Thatcher's election victory had great signiffcance for conservatives all round the world, so the outcome of this struggle deserves tp be keenly watched.



"We can barely afford the essentials — now they're doing the same thing to the necessities."

Soviet espionage failure generates heat in France

The London Observer

MARSEILLES — The Soviet Union's appetite for the West's military know-how has grown so demanding that KGB agents are taking badly-calculated risks to get their hands on the information.

Within a few days Guenadi Travkov, the Russian deputy consul in Marseilles, and Oleg Suranov, director of Aeroflot in Madrid, have flown home abruptly after being caught red-handed in apparently unconnected swoops by French and Spanish anti-espionage police.

During his three years at the Marseilles consulate Travkov, 47, a cheerful companion and fluent French speaker, worked his way up close to military espionage targets in the area, including the first prototypes of Marcel Dassault's Mirage 2,000 fighter, which is being test-flown at Istres, near Marseilles, and the Etendard fighter-bomber on the aircraft carrier Clemenceau in Toulon harbour.

It seems that the DST, the French anti-espionage force, became aware of Travkov's efforts some time ago. Last month DST detectives set a trap for him and he was caught in possession of photostats of Mirage 2,000 plans. Covered by diplomatic immunity, Travkov could not be arrested but was told to leave the country the next day.

An indignant statement from the Soviet consulate said Travkov had left of his own free will after completing his mission in France. But another statement from the same source protested that "the French police created conditions in which it was impossible for Travkov to work."

His departure has stirred up a political storm in Marseilles, where a number of French citizens are being interrogated about their contacts with the Soviet official. Marseilles has for decades been a Socialist citadel with a strong Communist opposition. Relations between the two left-wing parties have deteriorated since the breakdown of the Union of the Left in the country as a whole.

Commenting on the Travkov incident at a meeting of the Marseilles municipal council, the Socialist mayor, Gaston Defferre, said: "I hope for the honour of Marseilles that none of our citizens is involved in this affair. I hope too that no Communist is implicated. It is highly disagreeable for the mayor of Marseilles and the municipal council to have this kind of publicity foisted on our town."

Communist fury broke over Defferre in the local Communist press the next day. His reference to possible Communist connivance was termed "unspeakably abject."

Defferre, apparently unruffled, answered that he had merely raised a question which was troubling many people who noticed that only the local Communist newspaper was not reporting the Travkov affair. "If the spy had been British, German or American, just imagine what the Communist press would be saying," declared Defferre.

Not all French Communists are happy about the pro-Soviet policy now being pursued by their leader, Georges Marchais, which includes an ardent defence of the Russian intervention in Afghanistan.

If it is found that Travkov had local Communist allies in his KGB activities it will compound the Communist party's embarrassment. So bitter is the Socialist-Communist quarrel in Marseilles that, although some Socialists felt Deferre had spoken too soon, he was assured of support from the majority of his followers.

Socialists feel that the Communists have not only turned their backs on Euro-Communism but are determined to see that a Socialist-led Left does not win power in next year's presidential election.

A black African autocrat forces his country to prosper

LILONGWE, Malawi — The road from Malawi's commercial centre, Blantyre, to this capital city runs for more than 200 miles and probably one of the most remarkable roads in Africa, not just because it cuts through hills and valleys of great beauty, not even because it is so well maintained that a motorist does not have to negotiate a single pothole.

The road to Lilongwe is extraordinary because on either side of it, for almost all its 200 miles, corn is grown thickly and amply. That corn feeds Malawi, making it possibly the only country in black Africa that is self-sufficient in food. Corn is grown everywhere in this country, on hilltops, in backyards.

That Malawi, a landlocked country the size of Pennsylvania, can feed its six million people and have grain to export while bigger, richer neighbors like Tanzania, Zambia and Mozambique struggle to import food testifies to the manner in which it is run and to the development priorities of the administration of President H. Kamuzu Banda.

Several times each day, the Malawi Broadcasting Corporation's radio stations broadcast appeals, in English and the national language, Chichewa, on the need for "hard work and discipline," a favorite phrase of the 74-year-old Dr. Banda. A man of austere personal habits, he was educated as a surgeon in Scotland and in the United States.

Considered the founder of the nation, Banda is life president of the only permitted political organization, the Malawi Congress Party, as well as life president of Malawi. Through autocratic rule he has been responsible more than anyone for the country's economic growth.

Malawi's growth rate has been among the highest in Africa, 7 to 9 per cent annually. And as Malawi became agriculturally self-sufficient, it also prospered in its tobacco industry and its tea and sugar found their way into Western markets.

In the last 16 years, the literacy rate has risen from 5 per cent to nearly 40 per cent. Per capita income is now almost $200, and this year the gross national product will reach $1 billion.

The signs of relative well-being are everywhere: in the lush green farms where farmers and members of the National Young Pioneers organization toil; in the new buildings of Lilongwe; in the comfortable, efficient hotels here and in Blantyre and Zomba, the former Malawian capital, which are filled with businessmen and tourists from South Africa, Britain and the United States.

Malawi has telephones that work and electricity that seldom fails. The stores display English chocolates, French perfumes, American vitamins and South African butter.

And yet, after more than a decade of such growth, there are disturbing signs that Malawi may well have exhausted its resources of land and that its growth will slow down sharply.

Malawians have taken Banda's exhortations to plant crops so seriously that, according to experts from the United Nations Development Program, the land has been over-cultivated. About 34 per cent of Malawi's 45,747 square miles is considered arable, but more than 40 percent of the land is actually under cultivation.

The implications of this are serious since further cultivation is almost impossible. With Malawi's population growing at a rate of 2.5 per cent a year, a time may come when the country cannot feed itself.

After a period of amiable if uneasy relations with leftist neighbors, there are signs that Malawi may be faced with growing hostility over its diplomatic relations with South Africa. The country may also have to cope with problems arising from the internal troubles of some of its neighbors, especially Mozambique.

All Malawi's fuel and other essential imports are brought in by rail from the Mozambican ports of Beira and Nacala. Last November, guerrillas blew up parts of the rail link from Beira to Salima, in Malawi, forcing the Banda government to ferry in hundreds of tons of oil by aircraft from the Middle East at a high cost. The guerrillas were said to be opponents of the Mozambique government.

Banda did not assist the Rhodesian guerrillas who fought the white government of former Prime Minister Ian D. Smith, and members of Robert Mugabe's faction of the Patriotic Front have expressed strong reservations about his administration as a result.

Banda has taken the position that the Rhodesian factions were best left to themselves to resolve their differences with one another and with the British.

Malawi used to be known as Nyasaland, a name given by the British, and in 1953 it was joined in a multi-racial federation with the Northern Rhodesia protectorate, later to become Zambia, and the self-governing British colony of Southern Rhodesia in an effort to pool the regions's resources and markets. But the federation was dissolved in 1963 after opposition from Banda and others who felt that the African majority would not be able to achieve self-government within a federation that was clearly dominated by white Southern Rhodesians.

Carol Goar
FP News Service

OTTAWA — John Crosbie and his wife Jane are going to China soon to forget about the election that stripped the 48-year-old Newfoundlander of the finance minister's job which he alternately loved and swore about.

A few days before relinquishing his cabinet portfolio, Crosbie — wearing a tan cashmere turtleneck and wool trousers — relaxed on a leather sofa in his office and put some of his feelings into words.

It was not the blustery House of Commons joker who spoke, not the spellbinder of the campaign trail, nor the tough-talking finance minister. It was a mellower, more reflective John Crosbie than most Canadians have seen.

He's still probing and re-living the eight months the Conservatives were in power, wondering if his "tough guy" approach to the economy was too inflexible, exploring ways he might have softened his budget, asking himself if (as his critics complained) he was single-mindedly obssessed with cutting the deficit.

It's no accident that he's going to the other side of the globe to get away from it all. Crosbie admits frankly that one of the great attractions of floating up the Yangtze River is that it is so totally removed from the world of bonds, debentures, interest rates and price statistics that has consumed him since last June.

In the strangely unbusy days since the election, it has helped to have an exotic 18-day holiday to think about.

He also thinks he did the Liberals a favor — although he didn't see it that way at the time — by preparing Canadians for the age of expensive energy. Last spring, when the Conservatives came to power the idea of a $4 or $5-a-barrel oil-price increase was unthinkable. Now, although they still complain, people seem resigned to paying more than they would once have believed possible for energy.

Stretching the available tax dollars to pay for fuel is the biggest immediate headache the Liberals will inherit when they are sworn in. But Crosbie says that problem may pale by comparsion with two crises he sees just looming on the the horizon.

★ Inflation in the United States is now running at an annual rate of more than 18 per cent. Prices are sure to begin climbing much more rapidly in Canada than in the 1970s. "Our society will be turned upside down."

★ Even if the government's deficit remains at its present size, it is becoming more costly by the day to finance it. Borrowing costs are practically prohibitive. "It's already hard to get long-term money and if you can, the cost is fantastic."

Once he gets started, Crosbie finds it hard to stop himself from talking economics, dreaming about deficits, puzzling his way through the mess the new finance minister will soon have to untangle. He cares too much for a man who no longer has the power to change things.

GORDE HUNTER

one man's opinion

The discussion, at the moment, is purely academic. The time is not ripe, nor will be for some months to come. The Conservative party of Canada, licking wounds and girding for future battles, will put the leadership under close scrutiny and anybody who disbelieves this is either senile or wearing blinkers.

Joseph Charles Clark, now a statistic in the Guinness Book of Records for the shortest PM reign in Canadian history, has said, to no one's surprise, that he wants to lead the party not only in opposition, but into the next election campaign. The latter not likely for another four years.

Walter Baker, the minister of finance in the late Tory cabinet and party leader in the Commons, made all the right noises in a recent statement covering the leadership. He said he doubted Clark would face any challenge to his leadership in the next regular meeting of the party. He had nothing but praise for Clark.

"He came out of the campaign in the public mind generally as a decent person, a very worthy party leader who conducted a good, sound campaign and who accepted with grace and dignity the judgment of the electorate."

Mr. Baker is either naive or a straight-faced liar. Certainly Clark will face a leadership challenge, or if he doesn't, then the party can truthfully be called moribund.

THIS BIT ABOUT the public accepting Joe as a decent person and about his grace and dignity is almost too much to handle without benefit of barf bag. True, possibly, but if his major opponent, Pierre Trudeau, could get elected without benefit of grace, dignity or decency, then the criteria isn't worth a damn. It's a stinking thought, but maybe Durocher was right all along in his theory that nice guys finish last.

If the Conservative party doesn't have a long, critical look at the leadership problem—and it obviously must be a problem in that they got the silver rather than the gold—it will alienate a rather large segment of party strength.

If this party doesn't give a long second look at the capabilities of Flora MacDonald, surprise will only be exceeded by disappointment. John Crosbie will not be without strong backing, although to be frank about it, there can be no forgetting that it was his budget (good as it might well have been,) that allowed the Liberals and the NDP to huff and puff the House down in the first place. Crosbie, along with Clark, must accept the blame for a strategy that turned off the country. He must accept the blame for the unwillingness of Ontario Premier Bill Davis to turn out the Ontario vote, for remember, Davis delivered 54 seats the last time around.

FLORA MacDONALD demonstrated more than a little leadership expertise in her handling of the Iran escape caper. She demonstrated a certain toughness when she warned any future U.S. draft dodgers and/or deserters they would not be welcome in this country.

And, of course, she would benefit from the fact she is a member of a majority in Canada—the female sex. No, she would not automatically gain the votes of every woman, but a fair percentage would vote for her on this basis alone. And strangely enough, a fair percentage of males would swing her way if for no other reason than the fact male leadership has loused the country to a rather sickening degree. Forget about male chauvinism—it wouldn't hurt her.

The Conservatives must look far enough ahead to give a possible new leader the advantage of time on the job as Leader of the Opposition. It cannot switch horses mere moments before another call to the hustings. Should one defeat at the polls be enough to throw out a leader? The Tories must at least give honest and deep thought to this eventuality. See how quickly a hockey team will get rid of last year's goal-scoring leader if his production falls flat in the present season. Last year's great batting average is nothing more than a record book statistic that doesn't insure a job if the bat goes sour.

Right now the Conservatives, the Walter Bakers, the Robert Coates, etc., are offering up party solidarity behind Joe Clark. It's window dressing, but once the proper period of mourning is past, look for the shivs to make their appearance.

At this long range, I don't like Joe's chances.

Immigration favors lovers over Polish seaman's fate

Two Soviet ship-jumpers, a young man and woman, are being given special treatment by federal authorities in Canada. They have been granted ministerial permits to stay and work while their applications for refugee status are being processed. Their reason for jumping ship is apparently that they are in love. The man has deserted a wife and child in Russia.

Tadeusz Jakubowski, a Polish seaman is appealing an immigration ruling that, after two years in Canada, he doesn't qualify as a political refugee. The reason he doesn't qualify is because his case does not involve extreme humanitarian reasons or persecution. He defected because he openly opposed the Communist system. If deported he faces a grim future, certain imprisonment, even death.

So Canadian immigration fools around with "lovers" and turns a deaf ear to the safety of one of the few brave souls who has dared to oppose militant Russia. Russia, which is steadily occupying the smaller nations, enfolding and crushing them like a giant boa constrictor.

Nobody wants war, and the only way it can be avoided is by world policing, and a firm world opinion against blatant aggression such as the invasion of Afghanistan by the U.S.S.R.

Tuned in on buses

Regarding John Mika's wish for music on our city buses, why does he not buy himself a small radio and an earplug and enjoy the music himself? This would save annoying the drivers who would have to put up with it all day, or the other passengers. No need to have music put in the buses and so send the fares up.

Hell-upon-earth for animals

Congratulations to Stephen Hume and the Colonist for having the courage to "tell it like it is," regarding the Good Shepherd Shelter. Having just paid my first visit to it, my mind is still numb from seeing that hell-upon-earth for animals.

No doubt many pets were left there because their owners were too cowardly to face the thought of euthanasia, and selfishly put their own feelings before the wellbeing of their animals.

More money poured into the shelter by the public (Jim Ryan on the Joe Easingwood radio show said "Don't take food, give them money") would be completely wasted. Suggestions that the shelter should be taken over by "someone who would run it properly" are impossible to implement. The Good Shepherd Shelter is privately owned property, an extremely valuable, choice piece of real estate.

The cat and dog enclosures I saw were on the bare forest floor, and I do mean "bare"; black urine-soaked earth packed down hard over the years by hundreds of frantic paws. A dilapidated, doorless unheated shack in each enclosure; no water bowls anywhere. The "lucky" ones can drink from the filthy black rain puddles that stand in many of the runs. The others? They cannot turn a faucet or open a fridge door. Thirst is an agonizing thing.

Communal feeding means that the most aggressive get the largest share, the weak and timid go without.

The all-pervading question is—why? For what purpose are these animals condemned to miserable years of semi-starvation, raging thirst, cold, dirt and disease? To satisfy some vague naive philosophical daydream?

The only sane answer to all this senseless misery is to close the shelter permanently. A short time limit in which to adopt out as many animals as possible, then merciful euthanasia for the rest. Surely those helpless creatures have suffered enough?

Canada's role one of peace

We are alarmed by the sabre rattling that our politicians have been engaged in during the election. Canada has enjoyed a reputation as a peace-keeper in the world and our credibility as a peace-keeper will be lost if our politicians follow President Carter's hawkish policy. Many influential Americans question President Carter's Middle East policy, considering it to be an overreaction, and favor a more conciliatory stance.

Furthermore, the U.S. does not have a good reputation in foreign affairs, what with CIA meddling in Chile, etc., and of course, the Vietnam war, with carpet bombing and defoliation of both Vietnam and Cambodia. Are we to blindly follow U.S. policy, and wake up one morning engaged in another Vietnam, or even a nuclear war?

If we are to continue living on this planet, we must have peace, and Canada's role should be that of a peace-keeper. If Canada is to be a peace-keeper, it is necessary to have an independent foreign policy based on working toward friendship and negotiation between all peoples of the world. Jumping on the cold-war bandwagon makes this impossible.

No-party government Canada's cure

Regarding the recent federal election, with its obvious inability to cure the frustrations and alienations of the voters due to the polarization of parties:

It has been suggested that altering the electoral system by the adoption of some form of proportional representation might help by spreading party MPs more evenly across the political spectrum.

It is suggested that what is really on trial is the party system itself, which tends to accentuate ideological differences, provide means for economic extension and as Trudeau said, gives virtual dictatorial powers to a few.

During the crises of the 1930s depression and the last war, Britain successfully formed a national government with party politics set aside. Surely Canada is a nation in crisis needing a similar system?

National government is not one-party government, it is no-party government with MPs elected by public relations. Opposing views would be provided by meaningful debate with ministers to be elected by all MPs and not by a few as at present, with the resultant hope of really beginning to solve problems.

Censure deserved against Campbell

I wish to congratulate the Colonist on the two recent articles concerning the proposed cancellation of the bus passes for senior citizens. They were apt, brief, and to the point and have certainly released much fully deserved censure against Mr. Campbell of the Capital Region Board for the unthinking arrogance of his statements.

Has Mr. Campbell forgotten the fact that those seniors who do have cars must fill their tanks with gasoline if they are to use them? If the proposed three-cent-a-gallon increase is added to the already high price of gasoline those free-loading citizens he mentioned will be helping to pay for the bus service deficit.

I understood the cheap bus passes were intended to get senior citizens out of their one-room apartments so they would keep active and healthy. If they paid full fare they would certainly not travel much on the buses, so, Mr. Campbell's estimate of $250,000 loss is not valid, as far as senior citizens are concerned.

As for the ferries, senior citizens will continue to ride them for fun and pleasure and the joy of meeting children and grandchildren on the mainland, in spite of Mr. Campbell's low estimate of a group—many of whom helped by hard work to build this wonderful province.

Ercohill insists on reply

Allegations made to the Nanaimo Regional Board by the Ercohill Land Owners Association re Gordon Summers would not have been made unless they could also be supported by documentation and affidavits.

The directors of the board are elected officials who owe their responsibilities to the public, and the public is entitled to something better than the brush-off, "receive and file" or head in the sand in-camera hearings by the board.

This is the public's business and the public pays the bill. The public pays the bill for the staff, too, and when the staff members conduct themselves incompetently or improperly, the public has a right to demand that the matter be attended to promptly and properly by the board, with no in-camera hiding behind the skirts of the planning chairman.

The allegations of the Ercohill Land Owners Association are serious charges and the association is awaiting the board's reply.

Elected senators would help West

It appears that the Canadian people have chosen Trudeau as prime minister of Eastern Canada and Clark as prime minister of Western Canada.

The polarization of parties shows clearly that Eastern Canada alone decides what our government shall be. Before we had finished voting in the West, the election had been decided by the East. That has always been the case, because the majority live in the East. This is too large a country to be governed by a simple majority. The present system disfranchises the West.

It is time the West demanded a more equitable system. Proportional representation, which has been suggested, changes nothing but the results in a few areas. The ultimate decision would still be made by the Eastern majority. A complete revision of our constitution is necessary. Quebec has put forward its ideas for a new constitution, and the West must do so, too.

There are many ideas we could consider. One is that the Senate be made an elected body, and that Canada be divided into electoral regions, the same number of regions in the East as in the West, with an equal number of senators from each region. The powers of the Senate should also be increased.

I think this matter needs to be discussed by the people of the West and their governments. It is important that we make our voices heard.

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market burned up more records Friday, its heat undiminished by another round of interest rate increases in the United States.

The TSE 300 index rose to its fourth consecutive record high.

Major U.S. banks increased their prime rates to an unprecedented 16.75 per cent, a move which places increasing pressure on the Bank of Canada to raise Canadian rates, but the Toronto market paid no attention.

As one analyst put it, "You get hit over the head so many times it doesn't hurt any more."

Trading in shares of Gulfstream Resources Canada Ltd. was halted at 10:20 a.m. and resumed at 12:40 p.m.

Economy weaker in '79

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy turned in another a weak performance in 1979, growing at a slow 2.9-per-cent annual rate as both consumers and governments held back on spending, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The disappointing showing — for the third consecutive year — was down from the increase of 3.4 per cent in 1978. The value of goods and services produced in 1979 increased to $129.8 billion from $126.1 billion a year earlier. All figures exclude the effects of inflation.

Consumers, nervous about high interest rates, unemployment and inflation, increased spending by only 2.3 per cent last year with the emphasis on services — education, health and welfare — rather than goods such as homes, clothings and cars.

Meanwhile, government spending actually declined slightly to $22.4 billion as all levels of government carried out fiscal restraint, especially on wages.

Only the business sector contributed to higher economic output as spending on new plant and equipment — continuing a trend begun in mid-1978 — increased by 10.4 per cent after eliminating price increases. With a 33.1-per-cent increase in corporate profits last year, business has cash on hand to expand as key industries are running close to capacity.

A worrisome trend, however, was the rapid build-up in the value of stocks on shelf by manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers during 1979 to just more than $2 billion — the highest since 1974.

Although the inventories add to economic production, they are a major sign of economic weakness for 1980 because the stocks have not yet been sold. As businesses try to lower inventories, now financed at high rates of interest, they will be less willing to expand production or employment this year.

Some private forecasts currently say economic output will actually drop this year, though the latest government projection indicates modest growth of one per cent.

One bright aspect, however, is a drop in the current account deficit to $5 billion in 1979 from $5.3 billion a year earlier. The government had forecast a sharp rise in the deficit to $7 billion last year.

An unexpectedly strong export trade picture — buoyed more by higher commodity export prices than actual volume — cut the deficit, finance department officials explained. Export prices increased 19.1 per cent in 1979 compared to a rise of only 8.4 per cent a year earlier, but in volume terms slowed to an annual increase of only 2.6 per cent.

A declining current account deficit boosts foreign confidence in the dollar and eases the urgency of raising interest rates.

However, trade is not expected to give much boost this year as the long-awaited U.S. recession is finally expected to emerge in the second half of 1980. The U.S. accounts for 70 per cent of Canadian exports.

While the agency's figures show price increases for all production in the economy grew by 9.9 per cent in 1979 compared to 6.4 per cent in 1978, the inflation picture is not entirely bleak.

For example, wage and salary demands were held to 10.9 per cent in 1979 as the post-wage and price controls period failed to produce a wage demand bubble. This year, with lower demand for workers by business, wage increases are expected to stay in line with inflation.

Consumer costs for services showed the least gain, 7.9 per cent last year, while consumer spending costs for all goods and services rose by nine per cent. The biggest inflationary crunch for consumers came on semi-durable items such as clothing which increased 11.1 per cent.

Though inflation continued to be imported — through increased costs for food, merchandise and machinery — domestically-produced inflation increased more slowly, by 8.7 per cent in 1979 from the rate of 7.7 per cent in 1978.

Of major concern to the new Liberal finance minister — who must bring down a budget shortly — is whether to give a shot in the arm to the economy this year.

Finance department officials say there are two big question marks on the economy right now: will consumers start spending and will business slow its spending?

Compared to the U.S., Canadian consumers are saving a high proportion of their income — 10.3 per cent last year compared to 10.4 per cent the year earlier.

Unless consumers start using some of that built-up saving to buy cars, appliances and other goods and services, economic production and jobs will continue to grow only cautiously in 1980, finance officials point out.

But with higher energy prices a certainty, consumers may continue to save money to adjust to increased energy costs.

Even with a large volume of unsold stock, businesses may continue to use higher profit gains for reinvestment this year in anticipation of better times in 1981. If that is true, business spending on plant and equipment may once again be the only major cause of real economic growth this year.

Anyone for 17?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. bank prime lending rate reached a new high of 16¾ per cent Friday and was expected to climb to at least 17 per cent shortly because of the nation's bleak inflation outlook.

Major banks moved in unison to the record interest rate charged on short-term loans to the most creditworthy borrowers, usually large corporations. Since the rising cost of money affects all borrowers, consumers also can expect to pay more on some loans.

The size of Friday's increase varied by bank between a quarter point and a half point to 16¾ per cent. A week ago when the prime stood at 15¾ per cent, the industry split on what increase to make, with some banks moving to a 16¼ per cent prime and others to 16½.

"It's going higher, certainly to 17 per cent," said William Griggs, economist for J. Henry Schroder Bank & Trust Co. A year ago at this time the prime stood at 11¾ per cent.

Here's a very special bunny—
and full of love . . .

the Easter Bunny pendant

A limited edition in gold electroplate for just $35.

He's so excited. He can hardly wait. Because spring is coming. Which means Easter is on its way. And that's his very favorite time of year. After all, they don't call him the Easter Bunny for nothing! But, even more important—it's a time when he gets to make a lot of people very happy.

It's easy to see how he does it. Just look at him. You can't help but smile. Who could resist him? Happily swinging on a daisy, he's the perfect picture of joy. Absolutely radiant gold electroplate and so full of love and warm wishes—he'll spring right into your heart . . . or the heart of someone dear to you.

Once you see him you may never want to let him go. So we've put him on a special chain so that you can have him with you always. And what's more, we've even included a flannel pouch to tuck him in at bedtime.

The Easter Bunny Pendant. It's enough to make you believe in the Easter Bunny all over again. And it's the perfect gift for someone you love.

More good news. He's just $35. But here's a little word of advice. He won't be around forever. (You know how bunnies are. One minute they're here and then pfft . . . they're gone!) In fact, after Easter, this bunny won't ever be found again—anywhere. So if you want him in time for Easter, please be sure your order is mailed by March 10, 1980—at the very latest. Or, even better—mail the order form below today. Once you see him you'll be glad you did.

For Easter delivery, mail by March 10, 1980.

DON'T BUY GOLD

You want a sure investment? Fix up or improve your home. You might even enjoy living there while its value increases.

At today's prices you are probably making a serious mistake by buying gold. Even if the price increases to over $1,000 an ounce, the commissions and interest lost on your savings by purchasing gold at these levels will likely eliminate all of your gains. In addition, you will have to pay taxes on any profit.

Your soundest and best investment is owning a home and keeping it in excellent condition. Many of our customers have learned that, by improving or expanding their houses themselves, they can ehnance the value of their home considerably. What's even more significant is that, unlike any other investment, your family and you can enjoy the "dividends" by seeing the results immediately. When you do sell your home, the equity you've built up is not taxable.

Don't take a chance on gold. Visit any one of Revelstoke's home improvement and building supply centres in western Canada. Our friendly and knowledgeable people will help you make a real investment that is certain to pay off for both you and your family.

Over-the-table payments offered Swedish ski ace

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Ingemar Stenmark, the Olympic slalom and giant slalom champion, may ski for money over the table next season, Swedish newspapers reported Friday.

A front-page story in a tabloid said Stenmark has been offered $5 million to compete in the U.S. World Pro Skiing circuit for three years.

Mark McCormack's International Management Group (IMG) is trying to sign the 23-year-old Swede. IMG also handles the business affairs of another Swedish superstar — tennis player Bjorn Borg.

Bjorn Berggren, IMG's Swedish representative, has had lengthy talks with Stenmark and his family. However, Berggren didn't confirm the $5 million offer.

"But there is too much money involved this time," said Berggren. "Ingemar can't refuse, despite the liberal amateur rules and the fact that he has made quite a lot of money in recent years."

French ace wins cup slalom test

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. (AP) — Perrine Pelen turned in the fastest second heat by more than half a second to capture the women's World Cup slalom ski race Friday at nearby Mount Tecumseh.

The 19-year-old French star stood second after a first heat of 54.36 seconds through 60 gates. The youngster from Grenoble skied the 60 gates of the second heat in 54.08, however, to win in one minute, 48.44 seconds.

Nadezhda Patrakeeva of the Soviet Union was second with heats of 54.51 and 54.74 for 1:49.25. Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein, the current World Cup over-all leader, dropped from first after a morning heat of 54.11 to third with 55.15 in the second heat and a total of 1:49.26.

Wenzel's finish, however, almost guaranteed her a second World Cup over-all title. She now has 303 points to 256 for Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria. Moser-Proell failed to start the race when she came down with the flu Thursday night.

To win her seventh World Cup, Moser-Proell would need to win both slaloms and all three giant slaloms left this season, while Wenzel would have to finish out of the top 15 in each.

Abbi Fisher of the United States was fourth after both heats with times of 54.66 and 55.99 for 1:50.25, and Marie-Theres Nadig of Switzerland finished fifth in 55.12-55.81 for 1:50.93.

Maria Rosa Quario of Italy, who was fifth after a first heat of 54.86, was one of four women in the top 15 after one heat who fell in the second heat. Also falling were Swiss teenager Erika Hess, 11th; Claudia Giordani of Italy, 13th, and American Tamara McKinney, 14th.

Petra Wenzel, Hanni's younger sister, was 10th in 1:52.49.

The victory was Pelen's third his season in slalom.

But did you know he was also a great field lacrosse player.

Well he was. Ed Travers, head referee of the Pacific Northwest Field Lacrosse League, saw him play and says Brown is considered the greatest midfielder ever to play the game and was a three-time All-American at Syracuse University.

Travers let go with that startling bit of information last Sunday when he visited Victoria to referee a PNWL game between Victoria Seasprays and Vancouver.

It was a revelation but it's not surprising that Travers came up with it. He's a field lacrosse fanatic and is a driving force behind the growth of the sport in the Northwest.

The short bearded fellow looks more like a private school soccer coach but he is your typical U.S. official. He's vocal and colorful, a showman but at the same time an official that leaves little room for arguments.

Unfortunately Victoria fans, used to the quiet indecisive Canadians, only see his type on rare occasions. When the opportunity arises they're appreciative and they demonstrated that with more than one round of applause for Travers during Sunday's game. He was effective and in many ways provided more entertainment than the game as the Seasprays romped to a 28-7 win over a shabby Vancouver club.

THE SEASPRAYS are attempting to revive the sport in Victoria and they flew Travers in from Seattle to spice up Sunday's game and to provide some training for Canadian officials and some insight for the players.

The first thing he did was meet with the players and laydown the rules. One thing that was strictly verboten was swearing. Swear and you're gone from the game Travers told them. Boxla officials might do well to learn from that and start enforcing the same rule. Some games at Memorial Arena the language is bad enough to turn a Marine sargeant blue.

And during the game when Travers made a call he didn't sneak over to the scorekeeper and whisper it. He shouted it out and was heard clear up to the press box.

The fans appreciated it, the players appreciated it and the PA announcer appreciated it.

When Travers made a call you knew he meant it. Consequently he received no arguments from players. That's a far cry from the boxla game where complaining is routine.

Travers, a native of Brooklyn but now a resident of Seattle, is equally candid off the field and loves to talk about lacrosse.

He was impressed with the play of the Seasprays and says they are at least the equal of the two best teams in Washington — Oak Parlour of Seattle and Seattle Lacrosse Club.

"They (Seasprays) have good depth, high energy and are good with the sticks. They have the potential to dominate the league."

Travers says they need to work on the philosophies of the game. "They have to make proper use of the midfielders and the fast break."

★ ★ ★

MOST CANADIAN sports fans are well aware that field lacrosse is played in some U.S. universities but most would be surprised at to just what extent the game is played in the U.S.

Travers played in college and refereed in New York, Long Island and New Jersey before moving west 16 months ago.

"When I first started playing there were six high school teams in the Long Island area by the time I was officiating there were 25 high school teams and when I left there were 65."

The game is currently being played in 389 universities in 20 states.

Travers hopes to see the same type of thing happen in the Northwest and is working to make the PNWL a permanent and strong force with solid representation from Canada.

The potential is there and if the players and Canadian officials can learn to entertain like Travers the sport might gain a large enough following to stick.

Courtenay, Nanaimo lead sweep by North

By TOM KEYSER

Forming a unified front, north combined forces to rout south Friday night during the second round of Island senior boys' basketball championships.

There were no survivors.

The two southern squads that squirmed unbeaten through the first day's play were packed off, nursing wounded pride, to the losers' bracket of the double-knockout tourney. The other two south schools can go home and plan next season's strategy.

Friday linescore at McKinnon Gym: North 4, South 0.

Georges Vanier Towhees of Courtenay, holding down the No. 2 berth from the north, earned their spot in tonight's final — not to mention a guaranteed junket to Vancouver for provincial championships March 15-18 — by slamming Belmont Braves (South No. 1) 73-59.

Nanaimo Islanders (North 1) fought off plucky Victoria High Totems 78-60 to make their way to the 9:30 p.m. final.

Islanders, third-ranked in the province, travel to the provincials for the fourth successive time.

In earlier games, Port Alberni Chieftains (North 4) banished defending Island champion Parkland Panthers (South 3) with a 72-58 victory.

Assured of an Island placing at the provincials, Courtenay coach Dave Vranjes was justifiably chipper after his disciplined team shut down Belmont.

Now he's worried about Nanaimo. Towhees haven't solved Islanders yet, losing all four times they've met this season.

"If we come up with the right defensive combinations, we can beat Nanaimo," Vranjes reasoned out loud. A realist, he added: "But we're going to have to do everything right"

Towhees, who went 9-3 in the North Island league, threw a mixture of defences at the Braves which tied Muzz Bryant's battlers in knots.

Courtenay played a determined, controlled game, constantly alternating between man-to-man and zone defences. The Towhees' relentless press was another deciding factor.

"We usually play good defence. That's how we win," Vranjes said. "We don't normally blow people away. If we tried to score 90 points a game, we would probably give up 75."

Brent Daniel, one of Vranjes' offensive specialists, scored a game-high 23 points. Bob Hoeppner added 16 and Ron Short 14 as only five Towhees made it onto the scoresheet.

Belmont's best was Rob Ekstrom with 16, despite running into foul trouble in the second half. Al Cole, who led the Victoria league in scoring, had his moments on defence but had little luck penetrating Towhees' inside defence.

Forced to rely on low-percentage outside shots, Cole was held to 12 points. He has only 21 in two games.

Marc Haas scored 14 for Belmont, which — like Vic High — still has a chance to snag the third and final Island berth to the B.C.'s.

For one of the teams to turn the trick, a two-game sweep today is mandatory.

Belmont meets Cowichan at 10 a.m. while Vic High plays Port Alberni at 11:45. The winners advance to another game, at 6 p.m., to determine third place.

Nanaimo, everybody's pre-tournament pick, had a difficult time early with Vic High. The clubs struggled for nearly four minutes before Nanaimo's star guard, Jim Jordbro, scored the first hoop.

Jordbro had 19 points for Nanaimo, which got 17 from Dan Steffes and 15 more from Kurt Kelly.

Howe gets new mate, 800th league goal

Hockey veteran Gordie Howe, who will be 52 on March 31, did a couple of noteworthy things on Friday. First he helped welcome 41-year-old Bobby Hull to the dressing room of Hartford Whalers. Then he scored his 800th NHL regular-season goal as Whalers blanked St. Louis Blues 3-0. Hull, who hopes to see action within a week, skated with the club for the first time since being acquired earlier this week from Winnipeg.

Cougar netminders near record pace

By STAN COOPER

With 14 games remaining in league play, including tonight's outing with Lethbridge Broncos at Memorial Arena, Victoria Cougars are within reach of a Western Hockey League defensive record.

Goalkeepers Grant Fuhr and Kevin Eastman have all but clinched league honors, allowing 178 goals over the first 58 games for a 3.06 goals-against average. Cougars have also allowed one empty-net goal, pushing the average to 3.08.

And they're aiming to better the league record of 216 goals (for the present 72-game schedule) or 3.00 goals-a-game, a mark established by Carey Walker and Blaine Peterson of the 1976-77 New Westminster Bruins.

Fuhr, the sensational 17-year-old and a strong candidate for rookie-of-the-year honors, leads the league at 3.05 and has won 26 of 36 decisions while 19-year-old Eastman, 17-5, is second at 3.08.

"We're out to get both goalkeepers under three goals a game," coach Jack Shupe said Friday, "and they'll probably get seven starts each in the last 14 games. If they each average two goals a game for that time, Kevin will finish at 2.83 and Grant 2.88."

Shupe wouldn't say which goalkeeper would get the start for the 8:30 game tonight or Sunday's game in Seattle against the Breakers.

But calculators aside, Shupe says he has never had two goalkeepers play so well.

"We never had an outstanding goalkeeper during the seven seasons I was in Medicine Hat, although Peter Peeters (now with Philadelphia Flyers) played well in his last season. Don Caley (now a Phoenix dentist) was the best goalie I had in Weyburn."

While Eastman is eligible for the National Hockey League entry draft this summer, Cougars, barring trades, will have Fuhr for another season as the Spruce Grove product misses the NHL cutoff date by eight days.

Eighteen-year-old players are eligible to be drafted this summer but players must be 18 by the Sept. 15 opening of training camps. Fuhr celebrates his 18th birthday on Sept. 23.

"Eighteen is regarded as the age of consent, the age when a player legally can sign a professional contract," Shupe explained, "and the Sept. 15 date was set as no player can attend NHL training camp without being signed."

Cougars have had good success against the bewildering Broncos this season, scoring a 5-4 win here Oct. 20 and a 5-0 decision in Lethbridge Dec. 12. Broncos were 6-2 winners on home ice on Nov. 14.

The Alberta squad suffered its fourth straight loss under the guidance of new coach Vic Stasiuk when New Westminster Bruins rallied Friday for a 5-4 win. Randy Wickware scored the winner at 18:14 of the third period and also drew three assists.

In other games, Saskatoon Blades edged Billings Bighorns 5-4 in overtime and Regina Pats roared to a 7-2 win over the visiting Calgary Wranglers.

LETHBRIDGE (4) — Sandy Sullivan, Norm Flynn, Kim Bosch, Dave Barr. NEW WESTMINSTER (5) — Randy Wickware, Brad Yachimec, Anthony McMurchy, Rene Van Driel, Marc Chartier. Attendance: 1,430.

Potvin returning tonight

Olympian signs with Islanders

● Friday scores, summaries — P. 16

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Defenceman Ken Morrow, a member of the United States gold medal Olympic hockey team, has signed a multi-year contract with New York Islanders, practised with the club Friday and will play tonight against Detroit Red Wings.

"His progress is up to him," said Islanders' general manager Bill Torrey. "He understands that. I've seen him play against Central Hockey League teams and I know he can play at that level. Now (Islanders coach) Al Arbour and I want to see him at the NHL level."

Morrow, who played his college hockey at Bowling Green, was a fourth-round draft choice of the Islanders in 1976. He scored one goal and added two assists in the recent Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y.

The Islanders also said defenceman Denis Potvin is expected to return to the lineup tonight, but that left winger Clark Gillies will be sidelined for 10 days to two weeks.

Potvin has been out for 41 games after suffering torn ligaments in his thumb Nov. 30 against Edmonton. He underwent surgery for the injury Dec. 4.

Potvin, who also missed eight games at the start of the season because of a bruised chest bone, has played in just 13 of the Islanders' 62 games this season, scoring four goals and 17 assists.

Unbeaten Vikings reach win No. 19

SASKATOON — With one game remaining on the Canada West men's basketball schedule, University of Victoria Vikings are still unbeaten.

Saskatchewan Huskies, on the other hand, seek that elusive first win. Time is running short.

Vikings, already in possession of the regular-season title, improved their record to 19-0 by means of an 81-72 triumph over the luckless Huskies, 0-19.

Kelly Dukeshire had 19 and Billy Loos scored 17 points for Vikings, who led 53-33 at the break before letting down a bit in the second half.

Vikings turned the ball over 35 times, a total almost matched by Huskies. They made 33 turnovers.

Holding a distinct advantage on the backboards, UVic out-rebounded its foe 38-23 and Vikings shot a creditable 55 per cent from the floor.

From the field, Saskatchewan was good 42 per cent of the time and from the line 60 per cent.

The teams close out the season tonight.

Hoop series rescheduled

The opening game of the Canada West women's basketball league championship series, originally scheduled for Friday night at McKinnon Gym, has been postponed until tonight.

Slated to take on University of Victoria Vikettes, Calgary Dinnies were unable to take off from Calgary airport Friday because of problems with their scheduled flight.

Game One goes tonight at 7:45 p.m. The second contest of the best-of-three series is set for Sunday at 2 p.m. and a third game, if necessary, would be played Monday at 5 p.m.

Aussies in hole in cricket test

KARACHI (Reuter) — Australia was near defeat at the end of the third day in the first cricket test with Pakistan on Friday, only 23 runs ahead with four second-innings wickets remaining. Having scored 225 in its first innings, Australia was 90 for six in reply to Pakistan's 292 with two days play remaining.

Midget Bombers win twice

Nikki Bennett and Lora Patterson scored 10 points each as the Bombers routed Cordova Bay 37-9 at Mount Douglas School and Kathy Mueller scored 10 points as the Bombers earned a berth in the final of the four-team tournament with a 22-12 decision over Duncan.

Duncan plays Saanich at 1 p.m. today and the winner plays Victoria at 3 p.m. If another game is needed in the double-knockout affair it will be played after the B.C. junior men's playoff game which starts at 5 p.m.

Coghlan sharp

NEW YORK (AP) — Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan, abandoning his specialty, the mile, for the three-mile race, shattered the American all-comers indoor record Friday night with a clocking of 13 minutes, 2.8 seconds at the national track and field championships.

Coghlan, winner of 15 consecutive indoor mile or 1,500-metre races over a three-year span before losing his last two outings, reeled off the third fastest three-mile indoor clocking ever and the fastest over an 11-laps-to-the-mile track.

Emiel Puttemans of Belgium holds the two swiftest times in the event — 12:54.6 in 1976 and 12:58.9 in 1974.

The previous all-comers mark was 13:03.0, set by Nick Rose of Britain in the Mason-Dixon Games at Louisville, Ky., in 1978.

Coghlan, 27, the indoor record holder for the mile, was an easy winner over Tony Staynings of Britain, timed in 13:03.7.

Ball to manage Blackpool

LONDON (Reuter) — Midfielder Alan Ball, a member of the North American Soccer League champion Vancouver Whitecaps, has been named manager of Third Division Blackpool for the 1980-81 English League season.

Ball, now playing with Southampton, will return next month to rejoin the Whitecaps for the 1980 NASL season.

Bolton promotes Anderson

Another English League manager appointed Friday was Stan Anderson of Bolton. Anderson, a coach with Bolton under former manager Ian Graves, takes over the manager's position which has been vacant for the last month.

Pronovost leaves Hull — again

HULL, Que. (CP) — Marcel Pronovost has resigned as coach and general-manager of Hull Olympiques of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League for the second time, with indications he is headed back to the National Hockey League.

Although he gave no indication where he was going as he left the bench following a 7-3 Hull loss to Chicoutimi Sagueneens, reports from Detroit indicate he could be going there as a defensive specialist under Red Wings coach Bobby Kromm.

Pronovost was Hull coach for 1½ years before quitting under similar circumstances to become coach of Buffalo Sabres during the 1977-78 NHL season. Fired from Buffalo in December, 1978, he rejoined Hull Dec. 19 that year.

Ranger owner sells to partners

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Brad Corbett has agreed to sell his majority ownership in Texas Rangers to other stockholders, the American League baseball club announced Friday. Corbett's stock will be bought by oilman Eddie Chiles, publisher Amon Carter Jr. and lawyer Dee Kelly, all of Fort Worth.

The sale is subject to compliance with the terms of the limited partnership agreement and the approval of the American League and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Hometown to honor Bradshaw

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A Terry Bradshaw Day, honoring the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback who was twice named as the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl, will be held April 5 in Shreveport, his home town. Steelers team-mates Joe Greene, Franco Harris, Mel Blount, Lynn Swann, and Sidney Thornton have indicated they will be in town, along with Dan Rooney, president of the National Football League club.

Canadian shares sailing win

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (CP) — Skipper Thomas Blackroller of San Francisco and crew member Dave Shaw of Edmonton won the world Star yachting championships Friday despite breaking their mast and failing to finish the last race. Blackroller and Shaw had built a commanding lead in the other five race. Blackroller, 40, also won the title in 1974 in Spain.

Islanders collect golds at B.C. Winter Games

Jodi Rai of Port Alberni hefted 105 kilograms to win the 82.5 kg snatch event while Tony Hardy won the "C" division of the men's racquetball competition.

In the feature event of the day, Fred Rowan, 23, of North Vancouver took advantage of a hard-packed course to win the men's dual slalom ski title.

Rowan put together times of 19.65 and 19.66 seconds to edge Doug Knight, 24, of Prince George. Knight had runs of 19.24 and 20.53 seconds to finish .46 seconds behind Rowan.

Fears that Thursday's rain would continue, were unfounded. In the regular slalom races Thursday, competitors were drenched with rain and skied a fog-shrouded course.

But blue skies and sunshine greeted racers and spectators Friday on North Star Mountain, and the sun quickly burned away the morning fog that hung over this East Kootenay city below the mountain.

Rush Hislop, 19, of Cranbrook had more of a margin in winning the women's race. She finished in 41.52 seconds. Second was Ardith Watson, 19, also of Cranbrook, at 43.92 seconds.

The four-day Games continue today with a new contingent of athletes competing in 10 sports.

Badminton, men's and women's basketball, bowling, gymnastics, hockey, karate, cross-country skiing, speedskating, squash and wheelchair basketball round out the program.

Saskatchewan, Ontario rinks reach semi-final

EDMONTON (CP) — Marj Mitchell of Regina and Christine Bodogh of St. Catharines won their way into the semi-final of the Canadian women's curling championship Friday with victories in the tie-breaking rounds.

Saskatchewan beat Joan Dexter of New Westminster 7-4 and Bodogh got by Barb Davis of Lethbridge 7-5 in games that determined which of the four teams would make it to today's semi-final, earning the right to meet Nova Scotia in the Lassie Championship this afternoon.

Saskatchewan, Ontario, British Columbia, and Alberta all finished behind Nova Scotia after the week-long round-robin section with 6-4 win-loss records. Nova Scotia won a bye into the title game by finishing atop the standings at 9-1.

Both Ontario and Saskatchewan pulled out early leads in the tie-breaking games but had to fight comeback attempts to clinch the victories.

Saskatchewan picked up three in the first end and two in the third to take a 5-1 lead over B.C. but Dexter scored one in the fourth and stole one in the fifth to begin closing the gap.

However, the B.C. rink, playing without third Lou Logan who broke her wrist in the final round-robin game Thursday, could not catch Saskatchewan and Mitchell ran Dexter out of rocks on the tenth end.

Ontario was up 7-1 on Alberta, including a steal in the third end before Davis, who played on Myrna McQuarrie's 1977 championship rink, began to narrow the gap. The Alberta rink's lost a gamble on a tough take out to count five in the fifth endwas forced to settle for one.

However, Davis got to 7-5 before running out of rocks in the final end.

B.C. used Edmonton curler Anne McGarvey as a sweeper while lead Lynne Axford and second Nance Turney threw the extra stones.

Legion wins opener

Esquimalt Legion came from behind to win the opening game of the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League consolation playdowns Friday.

Russ Kennedy scored twice as Esquimalt scored five straight goals in posting a 6-4 triumph over Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Lake Cowichan led 2-1 after one period and 3-1 early in the second period but the score was 3-3 after two periods and Esquimalt led 6-3 in the third period.

Eichelberger strikes early in snatching tourney lead

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Dave Eichelberger posted an early five-under-par 66 and made it stand up all day Friday to take a one-stroke lead over first-round leader Dan Pohl at the midway point of the $300,000 Bay Hill golf tournament.

"I was very inconsistent, but I'm close to playing well," Eichelberger said after racking up six birdies, one eagle and three bogeys over the 7,119-yard, par-71 Bay Hill course.

Pohl added a 72 to his opening 64 for a six-under-par total of 136. Eichelberger had a 69 Thursday.

Buddy Gardner shot a 67 to tie Miller Barber and 1979 Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller for third place at 137. Zoeller had an erratic 69 that included a double bogey on 18, where he drove into the trees.

"I'm not driving well at all, but my putting has been saving me," Zoeller said. He had seven birdies but he also counted three bogeys plus the double bogey.

Barber started the day at four-under par and went to nine under after eight holes. But he then bogeyed four of the next six holes and finished with a 70.

Jim Colbert and Leonard Thompson were in fourth place with a two-day total of 138. Thompson started the day in second place, two strokes back of Pohl. He shot a 72 Friday, while Colbert shot 71.

Tom Weiskopf had a 68 for a 139 total. And Bill Kratzert was seventh at 140.

Eichelberger has won the Greater Milwaukee Open twice for his only tour victories in a 12-year career.

The 24-year-old Pohl said he "started out like I was going to burn it up with two birdies, then I had a lot of pars and was recovering from trouble all day."

Jim Nelford of Burnaby was also at 147 after a second-round 74. However, Dan Halldorson of Brandon missed the 148 cut by one stroke, following up his opening-round 75 with a 74 Friday. It was the first time this year that Halldorson had missed a cut.

Bid to carry big load in rich Sunday race

ARCADIA, Calif. — Spectacular Bid, thoroughbred racing's richest active performer, is scheduled to face six challengers Sunday in the $350,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

Spectacular Bid was assigned a career-high 130 pounds and drew post position No. 6 for the 1¼-mile test.

Bill Shoemaker, who guided the four-year-old son of Bold Bidder to victories in the three-race Strub Series earlier in the Santa Anita meeting, will be aboard again in the 43rd running of the Big Cap.

Also entered in the event for four-year-olds and up were Flying Paster, who will be ridden by Don Pierce and was assigned 123 pounds; Leonotis, Roberto Gonzalez, 113; Beau's Eagle, Laffit Pincay, 122; Silver Eagle, Fernando Toro, 121; Valdez, Chris McCarron, 123, and Double Discount, Eddie Delahoussaye, 122.

Spectacular Bid, who captured the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes last year, has never carried more than 126 pounds. Only five horses have ever carried as much as 130 pounds — and none more — to victory in the Big Cap.

Flying Paster was second to Spectacular Bid in all three Strub Series races and figures as the top challenger on Sunday. Flying Paster drew post position No. 1.

Jan plays badly but extends lead

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Jan Stephenson shot what she called "about as bad a round as I could," yet increased her lead Friday to two shots after two rounds of the Sun City golf tournament.

After shooting 71, her 36-hole 139 withstood the challenge of several of the pros at Hillcrest Golf Course, with a group of four coming home at five-under — Sandra Palmer, Judy Rankin, and Sue Berning, all of whom shot 70s Friday, and Bonnie Lauer, who finished at 71.

Another stroke back at 140 were Amy Alcott and Bonnie Tabor, both of whom shot 69s.

Mary Mills, a 40-year-old veteran of 18 seasons on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, had a chance to make a big move with three birdies on the back nine. But she missed a putt of no more than 18 inches on the final hole, taking a bogey and finishing at 70 for 141, tied with five others.

Stephenson attributed her one-over 37 on the back nine Friday to "losing control of my emotions.

"I teed off at No. 11 thinking birdie all the way and ended up three-putting an easy hole. I was so shocked that I lost my confidence and never really settled down again."

The low 73 players — making a 150 cutoff — now advance to the final two rounds in search of the $15,000 first prize.

Olympic tickets snapped up

BUDAPEST (AP) — Ninety per cent of the available 9,400 places for Hungarian tourists have been picked up in the first five days of Moscow Summer Olympic tour sales, a spokesman for the state travel agency Ibusz said Friday.

Gordie Howe reaches another goal plateau

The 51-year-old rightwinger scored his 800th goal in league play to help Hartford Whalers to a 3-0 decision over St. Louis Blues, moving the Connecticut club to within striking distance of second place in the Norris Division.

Howe, who started his NHL career in 1946, retired in 1971 and rejoined the league in 1979 after six season in the World Hockey Association, has 14 goals in 61 starts this season.

In other games, Vancouver Canucks salvaged a point by battling to a 3-3 tie with the Jets in Winnipeg and Buffalo Sabres bounced Edmonton Oilers 4-2 in the Alberta capital.

Howe's goal came at the 1:27 mark of the third period when he fired a 10-foot shot between the pads of goaltender Mike Liut for the 2-0 marker.

Hartford netminder Al Smith had an easy time recording his second shutout of the season facing only 14 shots.

Pat Boutette scored Hartford's other goal.

Howe also scored 174 goals in WHA league play for Houston Aeros and the Whalers, 67 goals in NHL playoff action and 28 in WHA postseason play for a total of 1,069.

In Winnipeg, left-winger Dave (Tiger) Williams scored at 19:48 of the third period for the Canucks who were down by three goals earlier in the third period.

With goaltender Gary Bromley lifted in favor of an extra attacker, Ivan Boldirev circled behind the Winnipeg net and fed a pass to Williams who jammed the puck in from the edge of the crease to score his first goal as a Canuck.

Stan Smyl and Thomas Gradin added the others for the Canucks, who face a must-win game tonight in Edmonton.

Ex-Canuck Kris Manery, Willy Lindstrom and Morris Lukowich accounted for the Winnipeg scoring.

Canucks trail the Oilers by three points but have two games in hand in the battle for the final playoff spot.

Smith team tops bridge play

Bridge team captain Ron Smith and players Paul Smith, Matt Smith, Mike Blades and Don Amstutz emerged victorious from a three-team, knockout competition held last Sunday to decide the Victoria representative in the Canadian team zone finals.

The zone finals for bridge will be held in Vancouver in March.

Local playoffs to determine Victoria's entry started last September, with 12 teams contesting the right to represent the city in the finals. The three surviving teams met in the showdown Sunday.

McAvoy's team then met the Smith team in an afternoon session consisting of 32 hands. After trailing by three points at the half, Smith's team rallied to win by 11 points and earned the berth in the zone finals.

In last Friday's Victoria Dogwood Bridge Club games, Ernie Tradewell and Barry Turnham were first, Paul and Della Smith second, Francis Sparks and Doris Lovric third, Wyn Ramsell and Mary Arneson fourth, Tom and Vivian Pelton fifth, Mac Campbell and Doug Hawkes sixth and Dorothy Woodman and Dora Duprau seventh.

Last Sunday, Dot MacDonald and Jean MacLeod were first, Anne Pyka and Rick Denman second, Pat Tasker-Brown and Irene Brown third, Jane Meredith and Isobel Mckenzie tied for fourth with Clark Gilmour and Andra Thompson, who were visiting from Kelowna, and Tom and Vivian Pelton sixth.

Wednesday results for North-South pairs were Betty Lorimer and Jim McAvoy first, Harry and Gwen Brawn second, Denise McColl and Doris D'Amico third, Gord Hoare and Bette Barnard fourth, Bobby Dyson and Vi Lewis fifth and Sally Hemeon and Mike Champion sixth.

East-West pairs results were Eleanor and Harold Gropp first, Vera Fraser and Helen Birnie second, Harry Carter and Norm Goodwin third, Isobel McKenzie and Jane Meredith fourth, Bill Mais and Terry MacKenzie fifth and Naomi McCambley and Muriel Smith sixth.

TV arts channel offered

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says key behind-the-scenes art and business figures have proposed a television channel that would show exclusively plays, opera, ballet, concerts, musicals and cabarets produced by Canadian performing art troupes.

And they're prepared to put up millions of dollars to start producing programming this fall, the newspaper says.

The company, known as Lively Arts Market Builders, proposes a channel operating nationally in prime-time three to four hours a night, seven days a week. The company would supply much of the programming for the channel, which would be available free to viewers via cable.

However, the Star says the company is not waiting for a special channel and now is negotiating for several stage works and plans to start filming them this fall for sale around the world.

The company aims to negotiate to co-finance performing arts ventures in return for all video and subsidiary rights, giving the company a big library of programming for sale when Pay-TV begins in Canada, and to Pay-TV in the U.S.

The newspaper says that in a brief to be submitted next week to the Canadian Radio-television Telecommunications Commision, the company estimates spending $12 million in the channel's first year. Of that, $8 million would be for Canadian fare, $2 million for purchase of foreign arts shows, $1 million to develop various projects, and $1 million for administration, sales, promotion and satellite rental.

Two film surprises

BERLIN (UPI) — An American and a West German film made a surprising sweep of top honors at the close Friday of West Berlin's international film festival.

The nine-member international jury awarded Golden Bears to an American entry, Heartland, directed by Richard Pearce, and the West German film, Palermo or Wolfsburg, by Werner Schroeter.

Counterfeit tapes and discs cited

Record firm facing charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Sam Goody Inc., one of the largest record retailers in the U.S., has been indicted on charges of selling and shipping counterfeit tapes and records, U.S. Attorney Edward Korman announced here.

The company and two of its executives, president George Levy, 60, and vice president Sam Stolon, 63, were accused of distributing "pirated" or counterfeit recordings of some of the hottest discs of the last two years, including the sound tracks Saturday Night Fever and Grease.

The defendants were named in a 16-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury in Brooklyn.

They were charged with one count of racketeering, three counts of interstate transporation of stolen property and 12 counts of unauthorized distribution of sound recordings.

Company officials, reached at the firm's headquarters in Minneapolis, said they had no immediate comment on the indictments.

But company spokesman Mark Baxter said: "The activities of counterfeiters are abhorrent to our business ethics, and we've been co-operating with the justice department. We will not tolerate activities not consistent with our policy."

The indictments are a result of a two-year investigation into the recording industry, including a "sting" operation conducted out of a record shop in Westbury, N.Y. Law enforcement officials worked in the shop.

On Dec. 6, 1978, acting on information garnered through the shop, agents seized more than $100 million in recording equipment at 19 sites in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Georgia and North Carolina.

Four men have pleaded guilty to charges related to the counterfeiting.

Recently, the investigation has centred on bogus recordings that were returned to distributors by retailers for refunds.

Levy and Stolon, along with their company, are charged with engaging in "a pattern of racketeering" in which they defrauded artists, musicians, recording companies and the public by selling counterfeit recordings.

That count carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

They are also charged with three counts of transporting stolen property. Each count carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The defendants also face 12 counts of infringing on the copyrights of the artists and record companies. Each count carries a maximum sentence of a year in prison or a $25,000 fine.

F.B.I's RESIDENT EXPERT ON SKYTHIEF COOPER RETIRING

Himmelsbach
. . . retiring

FBI agent Ralph Himmelsbach, the agent regarded as the FBI expert on the phantom hijacker known as D.J. Cooper, retired Friday from the FBI.

Patricia Cochran and her daughter Amanda of Oxford, Mich., have a collective age of 11. Mrs. Cochran was born on Leap Year Day, 1944. Amanda was born on Feb. 29, 1972.

Logan, W.Va., city clerk Violet Miller has been spending more time on the telephone lately, ever since the Logan Banner ran a classified ad with the number of City Hall. The ad said: "Vacant—spacious potholes on Water Street Bridge. Immediate occupancy. Inconvenient to shopping centre. Rent or Lease. Not suitable for pets." Mrs. Miller says she's received "one crank call after another" and she's not too pleased about it. Besides, the clerk said in a front-page story in the Banner, the bridge—and its potholes—didn't even belong to the city. They belonged to the state.

Assuming honor among thieves, two accountants have compiled some hints for people who might want to report illegal income to the government. Randy Blaustein and Edward Mendlowitz, writing in the latest issue of The Practical Accountant, a trade publication, say that many crooks might want to pay taxes.

NAMES in the NEWS

The accountants describe several options, such as paying into a conscience fund or filing a blank return accompanied by the proper tax payment.

Guitarist Ron Wood of the Rolling Stones and his girlfriend spent five days in jail after police found cocaine in their apartment and then were deported from the Caribbean island of St. Maarten, police said.

Both the white natural mother and the black acting-parents of a 10-month-old girl have lost custody of her. In Forest, Miss., Judge Guytom Idom ordered that the infant, Shasta Jenkins, be placed in the care of Scott County welfare officials until another home can be found for her.

American Broadcasting Companies, Inc., sued in New York Friday to set aside a recent award of $193,000 to Muhammad Ali to cover his legal fees in the successful defence of a libel suit brought by fight referee Tony Perez. An arbitration board concluded on Jan. 31 that since Ali was paid $5,000 by ABC for an interview with Howard Cosell, he was an ABC employee at that time and entitled to the award. It was during the Cosell interview taped in March 1976 for the Wide World of Sports program that Perez charged Ali had called him a racist and an unfair referee.

Joan Emuch, a 23-year-old secretary, wanted to be the village treasurer-clerk of Enosburg Falls, Vt., but was excluded from the race because she rented an apartment and was not a landowner. So she bought two cemetery plots. But Village Moderator Garnett Harvey said the two plots did not constitute ownership of property under local law and ruled her name would not be allowed on the ballot for Tuesday's town meeting.

Cooper
. . . mystery

The U.S. Navy will not take any action against Lisa Ann Woolf, one of the eight military women who posed nude for Playboy magazine, her commanding officer says. She was charged with violating naval regulations, and appeared before Capt. R. J. Omalia in San Diego.

Epidemic on wane

Virus kills 600 in U.S.

ATLANTA (UPI) — An influenza virus that changed its antigenic character just enough to make it a deadly infection for older people has claimed an estimated 600 lives, the national Center for Disease Control said Friday.

The five-week epidemic of B-type influenza appears to be waning, however, the CDC said.

The agency reported a marked decrease in the number of pneumonia and influenza deaths reported from 117 U.S. cities, but said "this total remained above the epidemic threshold for the fifth consecutive week.

"These deaths were primarily in the 65 or older age group," the CDC said.

The 117 cities used in the CDC survey represents 70 million people, or one-third the population of the United States. Flu activity was reported in 41 states, with the most cases in the northeast, midwest and the Pacific coast.

In addition to the flu and pneumonia deaths, the CDC reported 196 deaths nationwide caused by Reye's Syndrome, a brain and liver illness affecting children and triggered by a virus infection such as influenza. Ohio listed 92 cases of Reye's Syndrome, Michigan 28 and Minnesota 16. Some states had less than 10 cases and others reported none.

Don Berreth, CDC information director, said the current epidemic of B-type influenza marks the first time in 18 years this variety of flu has caused excess pneumonia and influenza deaths. In 1962, an epidemic of B-flu took the lives of 17,000.

About 100 deaths per week were attributed to the flu epidemic for the first three weeks, beginning in late January and early February. The fourth week of the outbreak accounted for some 200 lives. For the week ended Feb. 23, another 100 deaths were repored to the CDC.

Index flashing U.S. warning recession near

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government index designed to forecast the future path of the economy flashed warnings Friday that a recession may begin soon.

The administration is continuing its anti-inflation policy review and a group of senators asked President Carter to meet with them to discuss ways of slicing federal spending to combat surging inflation.

And House Republican leader John Rhodes and five other Republican congressmen urged Carter to submit a balanced budget for fiscal 1981 within 10 days, saying House Republicans will support such a move.

THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT said its index of leading indicators fell 0.7 per cent in January. It was the fourth consecutive monthly drop, the first time that has happened since late 1974 and early 1975.

The index had declined 0.2 per cent in December, 1.9 percent in November and 1.1 per cent in October.

The traditional rule-of-thumb is that three straight monthly drops in the index are a clear signal of an impending recession.

The index stood at 135.1 last month, the lowest it has been since July, 1977.

The administration has officially forecast a "mild" recession during the first half of this year. But so far, the economy has held up and some forecasters say it is now possible that a downturn may be avoided.

The most likely, administration sources say, is a cutback in federal spending. Budget cuts have gathered considerable support on Capitol Hill in recent days.

WALL STREET HAS ALSO been astir with rumors that Carter may clamp selective credit controls on the economy in order to cool borrowing.

"They're considering the whole range of possibilities, except wage-price controls," said one administration source. "Mandatory wage-price controls are just simply not being considered, as far as I know."

Leaders of a group of 44 senators asked Carter for an urgent meeting to discuss federal spending cuts.

"IMMEDIATE ACTION IS NEEDED to indicate to the American people the federal government is willing to take tough steps necessary to slash federal spending and fight inflation," Senators William Roth, Deleware Republican, and Richard Stone, Florida Democrat, said in a letter to Carter.

On Wednesday, Roth, Stone and 42 other senators introduced legislation that would limit federal spending to 21 per cent of the gross national product. Roth said that would reduce Carter's 1981 budget request by between $25 billion and $30 billion.

Bulletin blunt: Tito still grave

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Doctors for President Josip Broz Tito on Friday issued their shortest, bluntest medical bulletin so far, giving no indication they had stopped the grave deterioration of the 87-year-old Yugoslav leader's health.

"Despite application of indispensable measures of intensive treatment, the general state of health of President Tito does not show signs of improvement," they said.

The latest of the short reports that Tito's doctors have issued throughout his seven weeks in hospital here was only one sentence long. It appeared designed to discourage any thought that the doctors had been able to bring about an easing in Tito's steadily declining medical condition.

Tito, who has led his country for 30 years, developed kidney and heart weakness in early February, after the Jan. 20 amputation of his left leg because of circulation blockage.

Within the last eight days, the doctors disclosed that he was being kept alive on an artificial kidney machine, had developed an unspecified bleeding problem and had contracted a pneumonia which they could not relieve.

Tito, the only leader most Yugoslavs ever have known, has been confined since Jan. 12 at the Ljubljana Clinical Centre.

Roadside mishaps claim two lives

COLWOOD TEENAGER, VICTORIA WOMAN KILLED IN SEPARATE ACCIDENTS

A Colwood teenager and a young Victoria woman were killed in separate roadside accidents Friday.

THE TEENAGER was killed and power in the Wishart Road area was knocked out for about four hours Friday in a car-pedestrian accident in the 3200-block Metchosin Road.

Colwood RCMP said the accident occurred about 3:20 p.m. as two girls were walking along the northern shoulder of Metchosin Road, about 100 metres west of the Colwood volunteer firehall, when a pickup truck driven by a male teenager struck them both, killing one of them.

The truck then veered across Metchosin Road and hit a power pole. Power was returned to the Metchosin area at about 7:20 p.m.

SUPERVISORS had to replace the power pole, and carried out other work because of a wildcat walkout by members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

RCMP declined to give the names of the victim or the other girl who was treated at Victoria General Hospital and released, or the name of the driver of the vehicle.

The driver and passengers in the truck were not injured, police said.

EARLIER, a 21-year-old Victoria woman was killed Friday in a freak mishap on the Trans-Canada Highway near the southern turnoff for Shawnigan Lake.

The accident occurred at about 12:45 p.m. just south of the Shawnigan Lake turnoff when a southbound vehicle driven by 30-year-old William Graham Bean of Shawnigan Lake struck 21-year-old Shannon Darnell Conners, believed to be of 3891 Blenkinsop.

AS FAR AS Shawnigan Lake RCMP could determine, the woman was struck after alighting from her car, which was parked on the western shoulder of the highway.

Coroner Dr. R.R. Wilson of Duncan is expected to decide soon on whether to hold an inquest or an inquiry.

Centre talks continue on needs of retarded

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Friday that talks were continuing on a settlement "that will meet the needs of the retarded" at the Langwood Activity Centre.

Her comments, made in a news release, contradict a statement made Thursday by Dr. George Stocker, board chairman of the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped.

McCarthy
. . . hopeful

Stocker said, after meeting with McCarthy, that it was clear that no additional funding would be forthcoming to enable the centre to remain open.

However, McCarthy said: "Contrary to statements by Dr. Stocker, negotiations have not broken off. The human resources ministry staff is studying the association's budget proposal sympathetically.

"Dr. Stocker insisted on an immediate agreement by the ministry, something I could not do because of province-wide budget implications.

"He then took it upon himself to announce that the Langwood Centre would close March 31.

"If Langwood does close, it will be by decision of the association, not the ministry.

"Whatever the outcome, the ministry will provide services to the mentally handicapped.

"As far as my ministry is concerned, talks are continuing. I still hope for a settlement that will meet the needs of the retarded at Langwood.

"I recognize the financial squeeze that afflicts many such organizations due to increased labor and other costs, but I cannot give way to the confrontational tactics orchestrated by Dr. Stocker."

Broadmead squeaks by planners

The controversial 174,000-square-foot Broadmead shopping centre proposal has been endorsed by Saanich's Advisory Planning Commission, the Colonist has learned.

The commission was split on the proposal and the vote recommending approval was close, a municipal hall source said.

A scaled-down proposal was submitted by Broadmead Farms Ltd. and The Bay late last year after strong opposition by area residents to a planned 229,000-square-foot building.

The centre, in the planning stages for at least a decade, is proposed for a 35-acre site east of the Pat Bay Highway between Royal Oak Drive and Royal Oak Avenue.

The developers had originally planned a regional centre but revised their plans after the Capital Region District and Saanich plugged a loophole in the regional plan. Any centre exceeding 175,000 square feet now requires regional approval.

The proposed centre, called Broadmead Village, would be built in two phases and include The Bay department store, a supermarket and 76,000 square feet of retail space. Cost of the initial phase is estimated at $4.5 million.

Paint it ain't

Looks good enough to eat, but better not try. Gooey-looking white stuff isn't marshmallow cream, it's emulsifier used in the manufacture of latex paint. About 5,000 gallons of it spilled all over the place early Friday at Dicker-Martens Paint Co. Ltd., 2941 Bridge Street in Victoria. Cleanup was a real headache, as workers attacked emulsifier with shovels, brooms and pumps.

Year's extension on bow hunting?

Bow and arrow hunting will be continued for another year on Saanich Peninsula if Saanich council pays heed to its police department.

In a report to the bylaw enforcement committee, the department says the 62 permits issued expired Feb. 28, "but in view of the low profile this program has attained, we would suggest it be continued."

Neither the department nor the provincial fish and wildlife branch has received any complaints about bow hunting, the report states.

Bow hunting on the peninsula is confined to private property and hunters must obtain written permission before entering property.

Municipal solicitor Christopher Nation says in a report that council does not have the power, under the Municipal Act, to regulate or prohibit the use of bows and arrows.

An August-to-February bow hunting program was set up on the peninsula in 1974 by the fish and wildlife branch to reduce the growing deer population.

One couple, agitated at finding a hunter, bow and arrow in hand, stalking a trail of blood across their property, wrote council recently to complain.

Several Blenkinsop Valley residents have also complained that they consider the program dangerous.

But Vancouver Island Bow Hunting Association president Ross McLean says backyard archers armed with cheap department store equipment are doing most of the bow hunting.

Only a dozen of the 62 special permits issued were taken out by association members, he said.

However, the association believes the program should continue because it's better than nothing.

Firearms are banned on the peninsula, but bows are not classified as firearms under the Criminal Code and the federal Firearms Act.

'Disc' inventor guilty of inadequate testing

In a trial that dragged over more than a year, a Victoria inventor was found guilty in Victoria provincial court Friday of failing to adequately test his product before making it available to the public.

James Freeman Batt, head of Sunshine Jim Products Ltd., was charged under the Combines Investigations Act with making "a representation to the public in the form of a statement, warranty or guarantee of the performance, efficiency or length of life of a product that was not based on an adequate and proper test thereof."

The product in question was Batt's Freeman Energy Disc, which Batt claimed could turn water into a multi-purpose cleaner or could give cigarettes "a smoother taste."

A pamphlet distributed with the product made 13 claims, but Judge Fred Green noted in his judgment that crown counsel Digby Kier of the federal justice department in Vancouver challenged only two—the disc's use as a multi-purpose cleaner and as an additive to dish and washing soap.

Green said the section of the Combines Investigation Act under which the charge was laid stated that "no person shall . . . make any representations to the public . . . not based on adequate and proper testing." The judge also noted that the provision requires that the accused person lead evidence in support of such testing.

Green said Batt called 14 witnesses in his own defence, and all indicated they were completely satisfied with the product.

However, he noted that Batt did not take the witness stand himself concerning the origin of the "mysterious ingredients" in the disc.

The charge was laid after Batt sold two of the discs to an investigator July 28, 1978, at the Hillside shopping mall.

"There is no evidence of any test being made by the accused or at his request prior to sale to the public," Green ruled.

The judge originally levied a $200 fine but reduced it to $75 when Batt told the court he was on welfare and receiving only $175 monthly. He was given time to pay at the rate of $15 a month starting April 1.

Masked bandits pedal away

Two teenage youths armed with knives robbed an Oak Bay corner grocery store of $265 in small bills Friday.

Gamaliel Tsai, owner of T&W Market, 1165 Newport, was working in the rear of his store about 6:55 p.m. when the youths, described as being 17 to 18 years, entered the store wearing stocking masks.

One of them stood by the door while the other attempted to open the cash register. Tsai emerged from the rear and, rather than be threatened, told the youth which button to press to get the money, according to Oak Bay Constable Al Campbell.

The two escaped on 10-speed bicycles and managed to elude a pursuer.

Dog-barking law may be tested in the courtroom

Saanich's 10-minute-maximum dog-barking bylaw will be tested in court if it is not amended to exclude rural areas of the municipality.

The legal action is threatened in a letter to council's bylaw enforcement committee from Victoria lawyer Flemming Hansen.

Under an amendment to Saanich's noise suppression bylaw adopted last summer an owner can be fined $25 if his dog barks for more than nine minutes, 59 seconds. A repeat offence could cost the owner $50.

Hansen, acting for Dr. Christine Mather, 4834 Townsend Dr., says his client is being harassed by a neighbor who constantly complains about Mather's dog barking excessively.

Mather lives on a five-acre property in an area zoned A-1 Rural.

Hansen suggests the bylaw be amended to exclude rural areas in excess of one acre.

"We shall have no alternative but to simply advise our client that a test case is the only route to resolve this matter," Hansen says.

Both Police Chief Robert Peterson and municipal solicitor Christopher Nation say they would object to the bylaw being repealed or altered to cover only urban residential areas of the municipality.

Alderman's plea wins library opening aid

The Greater Victoria Library Board will be able after all to spend $4,850 on a publicity campaign.

The money is to be spent on radio advertising to attract new library patrons following the opening of the new central library, scheduled for mid-April.

Last week, city council's finance committee recommended that council reduce the amount to be spent on the opening to $1,000.

But after a convincing plea Thursday by Ald. Gretchen Brewin, city council's representative on the library board, the aldermen unanimously approved a request for $4,850.

Boards accepted

The Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association accepted Friday the request of the police boards of Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt for membership.

This means the association will be responsible for contract negotiations for all core municipal departments. Previously each board negotiated with its own police force.

Turgoose Point housing sought

Central Saanich council will be asked next Monday night to approve a development permit for a residential development on about 25.5 acres at Turgoose Point, overlooking Saanichton Bay, a municipal spokesman said.

The developer, Canada Trust's real estate division, will present a plan for single-family houses, townhouses and apartments.

Projected population for the area is about 300. The plan includes 2.75 acres of waterfront property for a park and walkway.

The municipality has been working with the company to prepare a plan that would be suitable to both parties, he said.

"It would be a high-class development, well-landscaped, well-serviced, with a high standard of construction," he said.

Grizzly joins parade

Canadian Forces' most recent armored vehicle acquisition, the Grizzly, was put through its paces Friday at Work Point Barracks during brigade commander's inspection parade and farewell ceremony for Victoria-based Third Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry which leaves for Cyprus shortly.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have had a stroke. It was two years ago. It affected my arm and leg. I was wondering if a heating pad would be good or not. I want to bring back circulation and movement faster. —L.C.

Let's start from the beginning—your stroke. That is a disruption of blood circulation to the brain, in your case that portion of the brain that controls your arm and leg movement. The stroke did not alter the blood circulation to the arm or leg. Now, taking up from there, it is true that with lack of use the circulation to the arm and leg may become sluggish. One reason for prompt physical therapy following a stroke is to maintain circulation and allow maximum return of function.

The heating pad might be helpful, but you have to be careful about burns, since pain sensation in the paralyzed limbs may not be good. I would not promise any dramatic results, though. Persistent and prolonged efforts to use the affected limbs is the cornerstone of recovery, and the tiniest improvement is precious, indeed.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 75 years old. Last July I had a stroke that left the use of my right arm and hand somewhat impaired. I believe that with therapy I can regain most of the use of the arm and hand. What puzzles me is a lump under my left foot. It is not visible, nor does it hurt particularly except when I step on that foot. Its like stepping on a rounded rock. The lump moves around from day to day, from heel to the middle and front. There is a burning sensation but it is not too bad, although this keeps me from doing the walking I should be doing. X-ray pictures show nothing. What is your opinion? —Mr. A.S.

I'm sorry, sir, but your condition is a puzzle to me, too. I cannot imagine what this migrating lump might be. I think an orthopedic surgeon would be the best person to consult. I will pass on to you any thoughts that doctor-readers might have.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I overheard a young woman telling a story that I found hard to believe. She said her husband had shingles and they finally got into his eyes. I feel sure this cannot be true. Am I right? —J.B.

The woman was telling the truth. The shingles virus (herpes zoster) can infect the eye. That calls for prompt medical attentfon. Corticosteroid applications are usually used.

TWO MOTHERS, FOUR CHILDREN

Single parents merge families to beat inflation

By LEIGH FENLY
Colonist-Copley Service

SAN DIEGO — There was a time, a couple of months ago, when Irene Brennan, recently divorced, lived in a four-bedroom house with her children, 9-year-old Ted and 5-year-old Annie.

A psychological assistant, Irene was nudging her private practice into existence. At the same time, she was struggling with the financial support of her children and a $500 mortgage payment.

Occasionally, to further her career, Irene would arrange to counsel a group in the evening, and find herself faced with the ultimate single-parent questions: How do you balance work and children? Will the children be forever scarred by a sometimes-absent mother? How much faith can you place in a teen-age baby sitter?

AT THE SAME time, half a continent away in New Orleans, Brennan's high school chum Lisa Cid was living in a similar predicament.

Separated from her husband for three years, she was balancing the demands of a public relations job she wanted to quit, her children (Carina and Eddie, ages 8 and 6) and whatever social life she could manage.

"If you wanted to take a course in the evening, you didn't just figure the cost of the course, you figured in the baby sitter. And you hoped to get one who could drive herself home. Otherwise, you'd be faced with waking up the kids, getting them in the car and driving the sitter home."

THE BRENNANS and the Cids now live together in the San Diego house, sorting out family squabbles as readily as they sort the laundry. No landlady-boarder arrangement, these families have merged. The confusion of their lives has probably risen geometrically, but in living together they have merged family responsibilities, financial obligations and the psychological burden of single parenting.

Family mergers may become a way of coping if interest rates, rents and real estate prices continue to soar. Already a scattered trend has begun across the country. Grandparents are moving in with their grown children and young married couples are staying home with their parents, in a way recreating the old idea of the extended family. For them the benefits may be largely financial.

BUT FOR SINGLE parents, economic survival is only the beginning. For the Cids and Brennans, the merger has worked in its first month—since Lisa quit her job, rented a U-Haul and left the Louisiana delta for San Diego.

"For me, it would have been impossible to job hunt 2,000 miles away," she explains. Tired of the set social structure in New Orleans, Lisa longed to return to California. "But with two children, no job and no contacts, to pack up the two kids and move would be total madness."

When the idea of merger was first raised, Lisa and Irene independently listed the pluses and minuses. "At first all I could think of were cons," admits Irene.

"The household is in constant activity. My kids and I have had a need to get away from it, to go in a room and say, 'Look, I'm going to be here awhile, alone.' And, before, if I wanted to pack up the kids and go to a show, I didn't have to sit down and discuss it with another adult.

"And I was just afraid of getting into something I wouldn't like. I think a lot of newly divorced people realize how difficult it is to get out of things once they are in it."

THE MOST VERBAL and enthusiastic supporters of the idea were the children—all four thought the merger a grand path to instant friendship. The first week was the honeymoon, Lisa says. Then the children realized there woud be a new phenomenon known as the shared room—and shared toys and competition for attention.

"It got to the point where Ted couldn't stand Eddie touching anything that was his," explains Irene. "He didn't say it, but he was angry because he doesn't like having someone around all the time. Both Lisa's and my kids are king of loners.

"They could always go climb a tree, read a book, whatever. Now all four kids are having to actively say they need time for themselves, ask for it, and actively seek it out. They are learning, and that's good.

FOR IRENE AND LISA the situation has meant new freedom. Baby-sitting is less of a problem, both financially and psychologically.

"I'm freer psychologically to spend time for myself and my practice without feeling guilty that I'm taking time away from the kids," says Irene. "And you know you are leaving them with an adult who is doing some parenting, not a teenager hired to watch over them."

Theoretically and philosophically, Lisa and Irene are kindred. They followed each other from high school in Los Angeles to graduate school in Chicago. They married, had children and divorced in like sequence. Now, without anyone saying it, Irene has taken over morning duties—breakfast and lunch packing. Lisa spends the day job hunting and arrives home in time to prepare dinner and do a fast cleanup. The laundry is thrown in when someone notices it needs to be done.

"The key was that we knew each other," says Lisa. "It's never been a problem that Irene corrects my children and I never hesitate to treat her children as mine. Without that it could have been a walk-on-eggs situation."

THE TWO HAVEN'T decided on permanence in the merger. Irene is partially convinced the the lack of privacy will eventually lead her into a different situation — perhaps a duplex where responsibilities could be shared, but families could live separately.

"I guess I'm in just too new a place in figuring out how I want to live to be in any kind of permanent arrangement. In a divorce you mourn a lot of things. One of the hard things for me to give up was the fantasy of a large group of loving, warm people living together."

Cheerless journey ahead through Orwellian decade

By GREG JOSEPH
Colonist-Copley Service

If the 1970s were the decade of the newly emergent woman, then surely the 1980s will belong to the contemporary North American male.

Certainly he will be conceded the next 10 years to learn how to better cope with the radical societal changes brought on by the women's movement—to deal with "his past problems, present uncertainties and future goals," as one armchair Aristotle put it.

That only seems fair.

And if, indeed, there is to be a shift in interest—and perhaps, sympathy—toward the male in the coming years, then what better oracle to consult than the psychology and self-improvement shelf of the corner bookstore?

A SYMBIOTIC bond between book publishers and healers of the mind seems to tighten with the birth of each new neurosis.

So here stood a reporter, squashed between the "psychology and self-improvement" and "sex and marriage" stacks of a bookshop, searching for phobic portent and the answer to a fundamental question: Is the role of the North American male about to change again—will the decade ahead signal the popular renaissance of the man as we perceive him?

For starters, the sheer quantity of books on and for the man did not bode well for his social resurgence.

THE RATIO was something like 200-to-1 in favor of the female (who not only shared the self-help shelves with the male, but rated a whole separate rack of volumes on the women's movement way down at the end of the aisle).

Later, a closer reading of tomes with titles like Why Males Exist, The Hazards of Being Male, What to Do With a Liberated Woman and A Man's Place—Masculinity in Transition, seemed to signal a bleaker future yet for the male, promising more of a social eclipse than a star on the rise.

Indeed, individually, some of the writers do manage occasional optimism. Although it is extracted like a stubborn tooth from an unwilling patient, the optimal lesson to be learned from the works seems clear:

THE BEST WAY for the male to survive in the 1980s is not to "tolerate" the liberated woman as someone who has been temporarily granted a modicum of freedom, but to work alongside her as someone who has finally attained an equality that was rightfully here all along anyway. By understanding her, then, he will better comprehend himself.

Still, the net effect of the authors' imagery and exposition, when taken as a whole, is that the male faces a thankless, cheerless journey through the Orwellian decade ahead. It is a depressing overview, rendered clinically, solely in shades of charcoal and black.

AS OFTEN AS not, the authors themselves seem as confused and depressed as the prototypical male about whom they write.

"I see a lot of men come in and just stare at the books (about the male's role in society) for a while," noted a young female clerk at one bookstore.

"It's interesting to watch men struggling for answers, like the women did at one time. It's the women who are walking out now when they don't find just the book they want, and it's the man who is having to look for solutions."

For many of the men, it's a solitary struggle. They won't admit they need help.

"WOMEN WILL come right up and ask for help in locating particular books they need," noted an assistant manager at another bookshop.

"They don't seem to mind asking someone's help in finding a self-help book. Men won't do that as much. They'll look for self-improvement books by themselves, while they don't seem to mind asking us about books on business."

> 'Men must work beside liberated women in order to survive'

Some women might say men need to swallow their pride—as they themselves had to do in achieving success in the 1970s—and try to adjust to the changing times. All's fair, they might add, and it may just be true.

But it would take a big gulp, judging from some of the sage comments offered in recent journals that seek to define the male's new role in society.

"NEW TIMES bring new demands, and men now chart the dead ends and blind alleys in which they find themselves trapped," writes Leonard Kriegel in his book, On Men and Manhood.

"And men discover that liberation, too, is only a word," he continues, "like courage and manliness and strength."

And, notes Kriegel, who teaches literature at the City College of New York, in a later chapter: "Manhood in North America has arrived at a peculiar destiny: As a condition it may prove to be as suspect as an inherited disease."

HE CONCLUDES: "The time is past when a man could believe that he could fashion a self able to struggle with the North American world, and still function within the proscribed confines of manhood. The loss may be permanent."

In his scholarly work, Why Males Exist, science writer Fred Hapgood argues that the evolutionary purpose of males of the animal kingdom is to serve females in all aspects of the mating relationship. Only those males who shoulder a great portion of "the work of reproduction," he adds, achieve genuine equality within the mating relationship.

But even males who go about their reproductive duties can lose in the long run, Hapgood notes by way of illustration.

WRITES HAPGOOD: "A biologist named Valerius Geist has measured the skulls of mountain sheep and found that males with larger horns died younger. He believes that large horns bring males sexual success, but that success has a cost. The sheep have to constantly ward off threats by other males to 'their' females. This destroys the fat reserves they need to see them through the winter, and therefore successful males die earlier."

Many men would see Hapgood's point as being analogous to what they term as the male's "no-win" situation in society today.

TO GAIN ESTEEM, a man needs success. To win success, he needs hard work. And the hard work, the argument goes, shortens the man's life span. Thus, success actually seems to breed destruction. Many call it self-destruction.

Los Angeles psychologist Herb Goldberg, author of The Hazards of Being Male: Surviving the Myth of Masculine Privilege, sees life this way. Goldberg insists that the average middle-class North American male has been so trapped by society's view of what constitutes masculinity that he is afraid to complain about the common cold. So, the psychologist argues, the man just keeps driving forward—into oblivion.

But where Goldberg sees the women's movement as helping to keep the North American male from killing himself by doing away with old social role models, Daniel Amneus, author of Back to Patriarchy, thinks feminism has been at the root of the male's decline.

BUT AMNEUS, an English professor who subtitled his book The Anti-Feminist Manifesto for the '80s, has a novel reason for believing this.

He writes: "All societies are run, and must be run, by males. There are a number of reasons why this is so— greater male aggression and superior male ability in the handling of abstractions being two.

"A less obvious but more basic reason is that males have a sexual inferiority complex that makes it necessary for them to find some kind of compensatorily meaningful activity which can give them assurance that they are just as important as women. Otherwise, they run amok."

Gangway, Gloria Steinem.

IN HIS NEW BOOK, Ah Men! Burt Avedon talks with a spate of celebrities and near celebrities, ranging from Helen Gurley Brown and Art Buchwald to Bruce Jenner and Tony Randall, in attempting to figure out what's happening to masculinity and male sexuality nowadays.

Avedon—who agrees in his book with Goldberg's stand on the supposed destructive nature of masculinity as we know it—concludes that men's fortunes will rise and fall with the economy.

If the economy continues to worsen, he says, so will the lot of the male.

"We shall witness another hardening of sexual roles as more and more men feel threatened with loss of livelihood, status and manhood," Avedon writes. "Men will not have the free time necessary to expand the softer side—they will be ulcer-bound and scared. They will have no chance to indulge. If there is an economic crunch, the situation can only worsen."

IN HIS WORK, A Man's Place: Masculinity in Transition, Joe L. Dubbert, an Ohio history professor, also sees the economy playing an important part in the male's societal role, but he finds the outlook more positive than did Avedon.

Notes Dubbert: "Men have had to take over more domestic responsibilities and have concluded that it is not such a great inconvenience in order to have a second income in the family, a necessity for many middle-income homes in an era of inflation and expensive leisure activities."

He concludes that what is ultimately at stake is not the success or failure of anyone's liberation movement, but "how to be better parents, how to be more creative individuals, and truly loving and fair men and women."

KEEPING THIS goal in mind, he sees no problem in tampering with what he calls "the rigid sex-identity distinctions in the past."

And finally, perhaps none of the more recent books on redefining the male's role in society is quite as practical as a wafer-thin (70-page) tome titled, What to Do With a Liberated Woman.

Cleverly illustrated, with elementary school large type and simple subject classification, it amounts to a humorous but usable primer on the "do's" and "don'ts" of getting along with liberated females.

IT DISPENSES all kinds of advice, from whether or not to shake hands with a woman (don't hesitate to) and what to do if she offers to light your cigarette ("inhale"), to how to get along with a female boss (don't use her as a substitute for your mother) and what to say to a woman doctor ("Well, Doctor, it hurts me right here whenever I do this").

The book suggests that a terrific way for a male to understand his new function in society is to appreciate the woman's role.

"Women," it deduces, "are looking for men who respect them as people. And that goes for cheerleaders and former prom queens as well as corporation presidents."

Patriotism tough trait to measure

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Are Americans losing respect for their country? I am 62 years old and distressed at what I perceive to be a serious decline in patriotism.

When I served as a naval officer in the Second World War, I was proud to be a U.S. citizen. I believed the United States was the greatest country in the world. I now have a nagging suspicion that our prestige has slipped not only abroad but at home.

Am I getting old and cynical? What does your mail tell you? — A Connecticut Yankee

Dear Yankee: Your "nagging suspicion" was right on—until Iran and Afghanistan. Adversity has a way of bringing people closer together and trouble abroad promotes patriotism at home. Here are some interesting comments from The Average American Book by Barry Tarshis:

"Patriotism is one of the toughest traits to measure. An overwhelming majority of Americans, maybe 98 per cent, have no desire to live in any other country, but our patriotic feelings took a beating during the Vietnam war and again during the Watergate mess."

The following letter may or may not be related to your "nagging suspicion." It came from Boston. Read on:

Dear Ann Landers: I saw something this morning that made me angry. I didn't speak up, and now I'm ashamed of myself.

I work for a suburban realtor. I often check out remodelling jobs and construction projects. Today I went to look at a duplex near the office. I noticed a workman wiping windows with what appeared to be a striped rag. Closer examination confirmed my worst suspicion. The "rag" was "Old Glory."

I asked the man if he knew he was using the American flag as a wiping cloth. He replied, "It was torn from the wind—doesn't matter now."

Isn't this considered "desecration"? Is there a law against it? Please reply in the paper. There's more ignorance out there than I thought. — What's Happening To Us Anyway?

Dear What's Happening: Worn-out flags should be burned. This is not a matter of law—it is a matter of custom.

Flagrant disrespect for the flag may be interpreted as an act against the government or an attempt to "incite to riot"—which is another story. In the late '60s when the Yippies sewed American flags on the seats of their jeans, they were asking for trouble—and got it. The man you encountered probably meant no harm. He needed educating, and you should have done it.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter married a nice guy. They live around the corner. I go over there after supper four nights a week to have a few beers and watch TV with my son-in-law. My wife yells that I'm overdoing it.

They treat me swell. I'm proud that we have such a good relationship. Please tell the old lady to get off my case. She'll take it from you and I can sure use the help. —Holyoke, Mass.

Dear Holy: You rattled the wrong cage, Dad. I founded the "Don't Drop in on Anybody Anytime Club." Being a relative doesn't entitle you to special privileges.

The best definition of "hospitality" is the ability to make people feel at home, when you wish they were.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife is a nice person, but she is a great talker and loves an argument. (She calls them "exchanges of ideas" or "intellectual discussions.") In the meantime, she can pick a fight with anyone on the merits of the Susan B. Anthony dollar—or if today is Monday.

The problem is that "Doris" (not her real name) complains that I don't give her proper backing. She says a loyal husband would get involved in the discussion on the side of his wife and "help her out." She claims that when I sit there and don't say anything it is the same as siding with the opposition. She calls me "disloyal."

To be perfectly truthful, Ann, I think one loudmouth in the family is enough. Please express your opinion. We both want it.—Lots Of Talk In Berkeley

Dear Berkeley: The best way to respond to your letter is by borrowing a line directly from yours. "One loudmouth in the family is enough."

Pint-sized toast

At roughly nine centimetres in height, these lead figures are a bit larger—and much more elaborate—than conventional toy soldiers, but they too are popular items among collectors. 'Crib death' inherited?

BOSTON (UPI) — A mysterious ailment that kills 10,000 infants a year without symptoms or warning may be caused by inherited respiratory defects, according to a report publishedin the New England Journal of Medicine.

Infants who succumb to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome—known as SIDS or, more commonly, "crib death"—probably have parents who suffer from faulty breathing control, said the report written by Rutgers Medical School researchers.

The illness, which often strikes apparently healthy infants, is the leading cause of death among children 1 week to 1 year old. About 100 theories have been advanced regarding its causes, but none have been proven.

Normally, people automatically breathe harder if their air flow is obstructed or if the carbon dioxide content of the blood is too high. But some children under 1 year of age may be unable to breathe harder because of the defect—especially during sleep, the report said.

The team, headed by Dr. Philip L. Schiffman, studied 12 parents of SIDS victims and 12 parents with no history of crib death in the family. The parents of the victims were discovered to have poor response to high carbon dioxide levels and obstructed breathing.

Children of such parents could be expected to have a higher risk of the syndrome if their breathing were blocked by an inappropriate sleeping position or an upper respiratory infection, the report said.

The researchers also wrote that results of autopsies have shown victims apparently suffered from long-term oxygen-poor blood.

They said earlier studies showed a relationship between SIDS and an adult disorder known as sleep apnea —the halt of airflow into the lungs during sleep even though breathing effort continues.

Such apneic spells have been observed in both infants who die suddenly and siblings who survive.

Three suspected of destroying papers

Crash probers suspended

TORONTO (CP) — Three federal air-crash investigators were suspended from normal duties last July after they were suspected of deliberately destroying documents relating to a 43-death airplane crash in Cranbrook B.C., a federal inquiry into air safety was told Thursday.

The RCMP investigated the allegations and officers of the force are expected to testify at the inquiry that the documents were shredded to avoid being subpoenaed.

RCMP documents obtained by The Globe and Mail show that the force began its investigation last July after John Sims, a justice department lawyer, told the Mounties he believed key documents relating to the 1978 Cranbrook crash had been deliberately shredded.

The report said the missing documents and photographs were needed because "at stake was a possible $15-million law suit which the federal government was in danger of losing as the result of the loss or destruction of these documents."

The RCMP raided offices in the air safety investigation branch of Transport Canada and seized files, photographs, tapes and other records.

Early last month, the federal government filed suit against the City of Cranbrook, three of its employees, the Boeing Company and Rohr Industries Inc., seeking damages for the crash.

Dr. Francois Dube, one of the three investigators reassigned to other duties, wrote a letter last September to Dr. Ian Anderson, his medical supervisor, complaining of the way he was being treated in the investigation. He said in the letter that "the only items which I destroyed were copies of material available elsewhere."

Dube and another of the reassigned men are accident investigators with the air safety investigation branch, which investigated the Cranbrook crash. The other is a department of health and welfare doctor transferred to the Aviation Safety Bureau.

In a recent interview, Dube reconfirmed that he did destroy some working notes and report drafts regarding the crash. But he said the practice had been a long-standing policy within the branch because such papers were not considered of public importance.

He said that he learned of the tranport ministry's changing policy to keep all investigators' records only two weeks ago.

Don Button, director of the Aviation Safety Bureau, said it had been his department's policy not to make public confidential documents.

YOUNG CANADIANS LAUDED

Others receiving the Vanier Awards were wheelchair athlete Joanne McDonald of St. John's, Nfld.; Claude St. Jean of Montreal, founder of the Canadian Association of Friedreich Ataxia; Otto Jalinek, Hamilton politician, businessman and former pairs figure-skating champion; and Haria Campbell, a University of Alberta writer-in-residence.

The five were chosen from a list of 138 nominations.

The annual awards, sponsored by the Canada Jaycees and Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., are named after the late governor-general, Georges P. Vanier.

Selections were made on the basis of excellence in a particular field of endeavor, demonstrated leadership capacity and involvement in activities for the benefit of society.

Arsonist warns 'fires will rein supreme'

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — An arsonist believed by police to be responsible for at least 12 apartment fires in the region and others across southern Ontario wrote a letter to The Record today which said "fires will reign supreme next month."

S.Sgt. Adam Schmidt said Friday the letter, which he described as authentic, was the latest in a string of 10 letters, telephone calls and tape recordings from the arsonist.

Police aren't certain how many fires the arsonist has set but they know he has been active in major cities in southern Ontario, Schmidt said.

The messages have originated from a number of places, including Toronto. No one has been seriously injured in the fires but in some cases people were trapped and had to be rescued by firefighters.

The letter to The Record, postmarked Thursday from Guelph, Ont., included a newspaper clipping from the Hamilton Spectator's Monday edition describing three apartment fires in Burlington, Ont., last weekend. The letter made no reference to the clipping.

Capt. John Gray of the Burlington fire department said in a telephone interview the fires were the work of an arsonist and caused about $100,000 damage after being set in storage or locker-room areas.

Schmidt said police had a number of officers working full time on the case across the province.

Compromise a must—Ryan

MONTREAL (UPC) — Quebec Liberals should not merely oppose "negatively" the ruling Parti Quebecois plans for the province's independence but forge a compromise between the status quo and sovereignty, party leader Claude Ryan said Friday.

"We decided two years ago that it was not enough to merely oppose the Parti Quebecois separatism negatively, nor resign ourselves passively to the status quo," Ryan said in an opening speech to 1,800 delegates at a party convention.

"It was our duty to propose to our citizens an intermediate voice between the status quo and separatism."

Ryan's proposals for renewed federalism contained in a "beige paper" released Jan. 10 will be subject to discussion at workshops during the three-day convention whose final resolutions will stand as the Liberal answer to PQ plans for a sovereign Quebec in an economic association with Canada.

But Ryan, addressing party workers for the first time since he was elected leader in April 1978, warned delegates against deviating from two fundamental principles—recognition of the ethnic and cultural diversity of Quebec society, a point Ryan underlined by delivering part of his speech in Italian, and the party's adherence to a federal system.

"All that which would attempt to affirm unilaterally one of these principles to the detriment of the other would only broach separatism or assimilation and this would be unacceptable," Ryan said.

The convention was the "ultimate authority" and "the supreme opportunity" to provide "a precise framework" for this desire for change that has too long remained general and vague, he said.

Helen Chesnut's Garden Notes

Some friends of ours, one of whom is an ardent organic gardener, were sitting around chatting about our hobby recently when one of the men presented my organic friend with a chart put out by a chemical company purporting to show plants which are allegedly poisonous. His point was that Nature can be nasty too.

Now, I'm using words like "purporting" and "allegedly" because one of the plants listed as dangerous and able to kill a child that eats a single leaf is the poinsettia. Well, for years now we have been told that the poinsettia is dangerous in this respect although I didn't know for sure to what extent.

Then, not long ago, a gentleman associated with the nursery trades ate a whole poinsettia plant to back his contention that the charge it is poisonous is just an old wive's tale. I'm not recommending that anyone eat a poinsettia but it does seem this plant has been given a clean bill of health.

Nevertheless, all most of us can go by is what the experts say and it is surprising the number of plants found in ordinary backyard gardens that are supposed to be poisonous to various degrees.

The most beautiful, innocent-looking plant may be a potential danger and often children are the victims. One plant which is quite attractive to children because of its rapid growth and large, crinkly leaves is the rhubarb.

Its stalk, which is commonly used in pies and puddings, is of course not toxic, but the leaves contain oxalic acid that crystallizes in the kidneys and causes severe damage if a number of leaves are eaten cooked or raw. Large amounts can cause convulsions, coma and possible death.

Many people are surprised to learn that another potential threat to children are ordinary potato and tomato plants, the foliage and vines of which contain alkaloid poisons that can, when swallowed, create nervous disorders and stomach upset.

Perhaps a greater hazard to youngsters are castor bean seeds which can be bought in any garden shop and are most attractive to children who like to play with the mottled black and brown seeds. Just in the last year or two some jewellery made of these were yanked off store shelves. Chewed or swallowed, these seeds become deadly because of a powerful blood poison they contain.

And would you believe the experts tell us that both wild and cultivated cherry trees pose dangers in their twigs and foliage which contain a compound that releases cyanide when eaten. Apparently, the symptoms appear quickly and they include gasping, excitement and prostration.

Among the flowering plants which we're warned can cause illness are larkspur, monkshood, lily-of-the-valley, iris, bleeding heart and daphne. The young plants and seeds of the larkspur can cause digestive upset, nervous excitement and depression and may even prove fatal.

Monkshood roots can also cause digestive upset while lily-of-the-valley leaves and flowers can cause an irregular heartbeat and pulse, often accompanied by digestive upset and mental confusion. The foliage and roots of the bleedingheart may be poisonous in large amounts and this plant has proved fatal to cattle.

As the foxglove is one of the sources of the drug digitalis used to stimulate the heart, large amounts of the leaves can cause dangerously irregular heartbeat, along with digestive upset.

Hyacinth and daffodil bulbs are best kept out of the way of children because they can cause nausea and diarrhea and may even prove fatal. At least, so the exerts tell us—and I'm not about to try to prove them wrong.

Jack Smith

Like some forlorn piece of debris from the storm, I have washed up with a severe case of laryngitis. It came with the cold I seem to have caught a week ago at a Loyola Marymount writers conference while sloshing about the Los Angeles campus in the rain.

It struck me on a Monday, I managed to keep speaking dates on Wednesday and Thursday, though I sounded like a frog. Then the next morning I had no voice left but a rasping whisper. Now even the rasp is gone.

Laryngitis is a very frustrating affliction, as I have found out before; evidently I am especially susceptible to it. The last time I had as bad a case as this was when I came home from a radio and TV promotion tour of Denver and Minneapolis in midwinter. That time I believe my vocal chords were actually frozen, and I didn't regain my voice until I had been back in Los Angeles a week and they had thawed out.

It is especially embarrassing to lose one's voice when one is the kind of person whose only hope of holding one's own in society is through speech: the graphic metaphor, the illuminating insight, the timely double entendre, the stunning fact drawn forth from memory to stop some bore who has picked up a palpable error and is running with it. All these ploys must be delivered, of course, in a voice that is supple, responsive and debonair. One's listeners should be reminded of David Niven or Peter Ustinov.

Before my wife left for work the other morning she phoned Dr. Reap. He lives just up the hill from us and sometimes when he's in a good mood will make a house call at our place on his way to his office, just for old times' sake.

"All he'll do," I said in my whisper, "is tell you to take my temperature."

"What?" she said.

She was standing by my bed using the phone on the nightstand. She told Reap what was wrong with me, then began listening, nodding, and saying yes. She thanked him and hung up.

"He says take your temperature," she said, and headed for the bathroom to get the thermometer.

"That's what I said he would say," I said, but I said it to myself, not out loud. There was no use damaging my vocal chords to tell her something she couldn't hear. Reap had sent me to a specialist with my laryngitis the last time, and he had said that if I didn't quit talking I could do some permanent damage.

As it turned out it was Reap's son who stopped by to have a look at me. Young Reap is a doctor now and in his father's office. I opened the door, my wife having left me alone. "My God!" I shouted. "It's a house call!" But no sound came out.

He followed me into the bedroom and got a tongue stick out of his bag and depressed my tongue and aimed his flashlight down my throat.

"Say ahh," he said.

I said aah, thinking how strange it was that after 50 years of constant advances in medical science they still did exactly the same thing on a house call that they had doing when I was a small boy.

"It's kind of a mess in there," he said. "Nothing to do now but take some aspirin and try not to talk. If it gets any worse let us know."

He dropped the tongue stick in my wastebasket, snapped his bag shut and left. I watched out the window as he got into a maroon Bentley and drove on down the hill.

For those of you who have never seen one—that's a house call.

I stayed in bed dozing and reading the paper and watching TV and wondering whether I would be able to work while I had laryngitis. I would have to try. I had too recently been ridiculed for taking a few days off when my finger was in a splint. But it wouldn't be easy. People didn't understand. You don't write with your fingers only. You write with your mind. And when you suddenly lose your voice it does something to your mind. It does to mine, anyway.

I was praying the phone wouldn't ring. I should have taken it off the hook, but can't do that. I always think of the phone as an instrument of opportunity. It rang and I answered it with an effort that would in normal health have produced an ear-splitting yell.

There was silence. Then: "Mr. Smith! That is you?" It was my daughter-in-law Jacqueline.

"I have laryngitis," I said.

"What did you say? Did you say something?"

I was alarmed. The grandchildren. No. They would ask a thousand questions. They would nail me to the wall. They would damage my voice forever. It wasn't medically impossible that they could kill me.

"No!" I said. "It would kill me! You understand? Kill me!"

"Mr. Smith," she said, "you don't have to answer."

"I did answer!" I shouted.

"What did you say?"

When my wife came home she said she phoned my office, as instructed, to tell them I might have to take a few days off, and somebody in her office overheard her and said, "I don't see how laryngitis can keep him from typing."

Sometimes I think I'm becoming paranoid.

Arthur Hoppe

I was shocked to learn that several citizens failed to watch The Great Televised Debate from New Hampshire last week in which the seven leading Republican candidates took part. They therefore probably don't even know who won.

Fortunately, I took copious notes during the 90-minute U.S. Presidential Forum and am thus able to do my small part to help a better-informed electorate choose their leader through the democratic process.

Probably the most important knowledge we observers gained from watching The Great Televised Debate was that Senator Baker's ears are too big and Governor Connally lacks a neck.

It is not true, however, that Mr. Connally talks without moving his lips. This rumor probably sprang from the fact that his lips are too small. But if you watch closely, you can see them move, particularly when he is defending the big oil companies.

You can also tell Mr. Connally from the other candidates by the fact he constantly arches both eyebrows, which should give him a look of wide-eyed innocence. It doesn't. The other candidates arch only one eyebrow at a time. Mr. Bush and Mr. Dole, for example, arch their right eyebrows, while Mr. Crane, who is furthest to the right, arches his left eyebrow. This may perhaps be politically significant. Or perhaps not.

Mr. Baker, to get back to him, hardly has any eyebrows at all. This, coupled with his overly-large ears and pointy chin, gives him an elfin look. Do we want an elf for president? Even if we do, many feel Mr. Baker is too short and too Southern to be president. The incumbent is not among them.

Mr. Reagan, needless to say, is too wrinkled. His hair is too pomaded, his mouth too narrow and his face too lopsided. This makes him look like an aging Ronald Reagan. (You remember him.)

Mr. Bush, on the other hand, looks like an aging Jack Lemmon. So the voters do have a clear choice here. Mr. Bush's other attributes are that his eyes are too narrow, his lips are too thin and he constantly waves a clenched left fist, which should indicate determination. Perhaps he should try waving his right. Or perhaps not.

Mr. Dole presents a third alternative. He looks like an aging chipmunk. His chances appear dim, however, as this country has not elected an aging chipmunk to the White House since Herbert Hoover.

That leaves Mr. Anderson. Mr. Anderson was the only candidate who wore glasses instead of contact lenses and who offered a specific solution to a specific problem (a 50-cent-per-gallon tax on gasoline to solve the energy crisis). These missteps show Mr. Anderson is not a serious candidate.

All the other candidates said the only thing they wanted to do was discuss the issues. The issues are who hates the Russians most, who loves America most and who most favors balancing the budget by increasing defence spending. So much for the issues.

Unfortunately, we will not know which Democrat is too short, which too jowly and which too saturnine until they, too, stage a Great Television Debate to better inform the electorate. So far, they have wisely managed to avoid the challenge.

The largest dinosaur eggs discovered were those of a Hypselosaurus priscus found in October, 1961, near Aix-en-Provence, in southern France. The eggs of this 30-foot-long sauropod, believed to be 80,000,000 years old, would have had a length of 12 inches and a diameter of 10 inches.

Piff 'n' twaddle running amok over West split

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
Colonist-FP News Service

VANCOUVER — One hates to chastise one's colleagues, but there really has been a lot of piff and twaddle this past week over the supposed spectre of western separatism.

Anyone bobbing for olives in a Toronto noontime retreat for tired executives would get the impression from some of the reports that the muskets are out and the search is on for some latter-day Betsy Ross to sew up the bedsheets as a flag.

The nuts are still with us, as they always will be, but exaggerated claims which add to their importance don't really enhance the practice of journalism.

All the reports of open-line radio listeners preparing to burn down Senator Keith Davey originated with one Vancouver station that employs a succession of open-mouth hosts who are situated philosophically just slightly to the right of Herbert Hoover.

THE "DELUGE" OF CALLERS demanding that British Columbia be made a separate nation (before lunch if not sooner) turned out to be orchestrated by one John Reynolds, who was a fiercely partisan Tory MP before retiring to the intellectual rewards of dollar-a-holler commercial radio.

Reynolds, who was once described while in Ottawa as having the attention-span of a hummingbird, is always first off the mark on any spurious cause—such as petitioning a French-language TV station out of Vancouver.

His mighty survey of shut-ins, it turns out, lasted all of 20 minutes and got 67 calls for separation and 42 against. Dr. Gallup must be worried about his laurels.

IT IS NATURAL THAT THE Tory Reynolds (who was the first person to enter the 1976 Conservative leadership contest and the first to drop out when everyone yawned) would try anything to discredit the Liberal victory.

What is more puzzling is the attempt by otherwise serious reporters to legitimize the separatist loony fringe.

THERE WAS ED FLEMING, AN aircraft parts salesman who was going to remake the world with his Western Canada Party. He used to distinguish himself by referring to Pierre Trudeau as "that Commie creep." He folded his party two years ago—or rather it folded under him like a sack of wet spaghetti.

There is Doug Christie, a young Victoria lawyer whose eyes burn like cigarette butts with the intensity of an Elmer Gantry, or perhaps Mean Joe Greene when aroused.

When he started his Committee of Western Independence in 1975, he got all of 125 bodies on chairs. By 1978, after his vigorous promotion on every TV show on the horizon where those passionate eyes often short-circuited the fuses, he got 60 people to the annual meeting.

When Christie appeared before the Pepin-Robarts Task Force in 1978 and shouted "Vive le Quebec libre," the only thing that ran through the Vancouver crowd was a large titter.

He proposed a 10-vehicle caravan to carry the message of independence across the West, a vision that brought to mind Steinbeck's Okies headed for California.

THE DUSTBOWL OF SEPARATISM has not been kind to Christie. He renamed his one-man crusade—run out of his Victoria law office—the left-aggressive Committee of Western Unity and then had it swallowed by something called the Western National Association.

After all the inflamed feelings about B.C. being left off the Liberal platter Feb. 18, how many outraged British Columbians showed up Sunday for the association's call for a new political party?

Just 50, and half of them wandered off, bored after a platform squabble involving the discredited Christie managed to get just one motion through: A ban on smoking during the meeting.

"THE NUMBER OF WESTERN separatists is higher this week than ever before," cried guest speaker Allan Robertson. Probably—and they could be fitted into a Volkswagen camper.

The Western Independence Party managed to mount one candidate in last year's B.C. provincial election, and finished down the track to the Rhinos.

A MEASURE OF THE MOOD IS Bill Van Der Zalm, a once ambitious Social Credit cabinet minister. On the night of the 1976 Parti Quebecois victory, Van Der Zalm allowed it wouldn't worry him if Quebec separated because then his cornflakes boxes would be safe.

He is now not taken seriously by anyone, including his own premier, and has been demoted in the B.C. cabinet ever since.

COMMONS OFFICE FOR RENT

OTTAWA (CP) — Arnold Peters, 57, left Parliament the same way he served it for 23 years—with a splash of unorthodoxy.

A sign on the door of the sixth floor office he occupied for 10 years before his defeat as a New Democratic Party candidate in Northern Ontario said:

"Due to circumstances beyond our control we are forced out of business.

"It was a pleasure, and thanks for your many kindnesses during the last 23 years."

Then, with a touch of bravado which he obviously did not feel, he put up a for rent sign.

It was a sad veteran of many Commons wars who packed his things this week, sent 85 boxes of material to the National Archives, said goodby to his staff—including an assistant of 20 years—and headed home to New Liskeard in Timiskaming constituency.

Election vets speak

Grit rebirth options seen

OTTAWA (CP) — Major constitutional reform with a distinctly American flavor. House-cleaning of the office of the new prime minister. Widely-respected cabinet ministers with regional responsibilities. A renewed effort to communicate.

These are some of the stated options open to Pierre Trudeau in his quest to rebuild the Liberals in Western Canada after a decade that all but destroyed both federal and provincial wings of the party in the region.

The suggestions were advanced in interviews this week by The Canadian Press with four prominent veterans of electoral wars in the West—three of them victims of voter antipathy.

All four agree the party has a credibility problem, but offer different opinions about a rebirth from the ashes of the Feb. 18 election which returned only two Liberals to the Commons west of the Ontario-Manitoba boundary.

Izzy Asper of Winnipeg sees radical constitutional change as the key to his long-held hope of getting a better deal for the West in Confederation.

As leader of the Manitoba Liberal party between 1970 and 1975, Asper often heard his proposals criticized as too American. But he says the passion for civil and economic rights that motivated populists in the U.S. Midwest about 1900 is appropriate today for what he sees as a dynamic, almost frontier-like economy in Western Canada.

"The West is still in a pioneering spirit," he says.

A former Alberta MP, Hu Harries of Edmonton, has fewer complaints about the system, but many about those who run it—specifically the "goddamn expatriates" from the West who have advised Trudeau over the years.

Harries says "people who went to university out here and then disappeared into sleepy hollow down there" have lost touch with the West and have been giving the Liberal leader "incredibly bad advice."

Former justice minister Ron Basford, who retired from politics last year to practise law in Vancouver, says the fact the Liberal party has traditionally turned to the East for its leaders probably explains part of the disenchantment of B.C. voters.

Party policies of one kind or another were mentioned as one factor in the Liberals' decline in the West, but former Saskatchewan MP Ralph Goodale says it's not so much the policies themselves as the way they are perceived.

Goodale says the major policy initiatives taken by the former Liberal government to improve the Prairie grain industry were not altered by Joe Clark and his Progressive Conservative government.

Trudeau calling MPs to Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime minister-designate Pierre Trudeau has summoned all his MPs to a meeting here March 11 to discuss the business of the forthcoming session of Parliament.

The 146 MPs elected or re-elected in last week's federal election, which saw the defeat of the Progressive Conservative government, will be joined by senators, said Jacques Guilbault, MP for St. Jacques, Que., and national caucus chairman.

It will be the first such meeting since the election.

Trudeau has already announced he will name his new cabinet ministers Monday and the Parliament will meet after Easter.

CAPITAL TALK

By DOUG SMALL
Colonist-FP News Service

OTTAWA — When they emerged from their private post-election meeting this week, Tories left the public impression that, in the words of former finance minister John Crosbie, as far as the party is concerned "everything is sweetness and light."

"We're all behind him," said Crosbie of his leader Joe Clark.

The way we hear it, he should have added the qualifier "temporarily."

Now that they had a chance to look over news reports put together from interviews with Crosbie, Clark and the like after the confidential meeting of MPs, defeated candidates and party strategists, a number of Tories with lower profiles are shaking their heads in disbelief.

"I couldn't have been at the same meeting," says B.C. Tory Lorne McCuish after puzzling over accounts (fed by master feinter Sinclair Stevens) that Conservatives will be vindicated in an election only months down the road.

More to the point, however, are reports that Clark did not get the "100-per-cent" support that his national campaign chairman Paul Curley said he got at the gathering.

Nor, we're told, did his staff and advisers, who came in for a drubbing.

Now there was support of a sort for Clark, as one might expect in the rally-round-the-leader atmosphere that falls over a party, win or lose, immediately after an election.

But as defeated Tory Duncan Beattie is said to have put it, if Joe Clark jokes are still around two years from now, then Joe Clark will have to go.

Others agreed, praising Clark for his efforts, but noting that the former prime minister's image is a problem for the party, and unless it improves, well . . .

What rankled the Tories we've talked to more, however, was Clark's attitude toward his advisers.

The leader, it is said, let it be known that he stood four-square behind those responsible for the party's defeat, and that he considered any insult to them an insult to himself. There would be no staff clean-out. He was the leader. He made the decisions. They couldn't be blamed.

Yet the fact is, of course, that they are being blamed. (Clark's chief of staff, Bill Neville, is repeatedly singled out, as are Curley and others who, like Clark himself, believed Liberals would back away at the last minute on Dec. 13 to avoid an election.)

Clark, as we've suggested, is attempting to nip such dissent in the bud, calling for a quick review of his leadership at a convention this fall before his detractors gain strength.

It's a shrewd move. But if he keeps his staff, and his current I-make-the-decisions attitude, it won't be enough.

Before the next election, he'll be gone.

Pierre Trudeau is said to be looking for what Liberals describe as fresh faces for his cabinet. His job has not been made easier by the fact—Tory election ads to the contrary—a whole stable full of his old ministers are back and want in.

Allan MacEachen, Jean Chretien and John Munro have been with him all along, while Jean-Luc Pepin and Bryce Mackasey have returned after serving time in outside pastures.

Warhorses all. Which will Trudeau reharness for cabinet? Which will he consign to the backbench drays? For those answers, we're afraid, you'll have to wait until Monday.

THE ACES® IRA G. CORN, JR.

"If business didn't have its ups and downs, there would be no business at all."
---- Paul von Ringelheim.

There were lots of ups and downs in the 1979 World Championships. The Americans started the finals against Italy down 37 IMPS because of a negative qualifying round carryover. After 32 hands, they had picked up 62 IMPS to lead by 25 IMPS.

Dallasite Malcolm Brachman, a newcomer to international competition, was in the lineup during this period. Thereafter, the experienced lineup of former Aces played throughout the balance of the match and, although they increased their lead to 55 at one point, the "downs" got to them and the Americans finished with a close victory, winning by only five IMPS.

Today's hand was one of the key Italian pickups during the late stages of the match.

A club lead would have set the game before declarer would have any chance, however, a heart was led at both tables with South declarer after North's use of the unusual no trump jump, asking for minors.

Former Ace Paul Soloway of Los Angeles played for a favorable club position and lost clubs and a diamond for down one. Italy's Georgio Belladonna succeeded by winning the first trick with dummy's heart 10 and later end-playing East.

After the heart 10 held, the two high diamonds and the heart ace were cashed and a spade was led to declarer's ace. Declarer then cashed a high heart, ruffed his last spade in dummy and stuffed East on lead with the high trump.

East was now forced to lead a club or a spade and declarer had 11 tricks and a well-earned game.

My hearty congratulations to the winners. Team members were Malcolm Brachman, Bob Goldman and Mike Passell of Dallas and Bill Eisenberg, Eddie Kantar and Paul Soloway of Los Angeles.

Mining interests urged to switch

The mining industry does not need to develop B.C.'s uranium deposits when there are many acceptable minerals such as copper that could be mined in the province, Premier Bennett said Friday.

The premier, reacting to criticism from mining industry spokesman of the seven-year ban on uranium mining and exploration in the province announced Wednesday, said he was prepared to discuss the issue with the companies.

Mining spokesmen called the ban a political move.

"There are now many mining opportunities in the province," Bennett said. "I can think of many projects in acceptable minerals that could be profitably mined.

"They could usefully harness all of the capital without needing to look at what would be mainly marginal uranium deposits."

Ministry blamed

Troubled girl unsupervised

SURREY (CP) — A former Surrey mayor says the B.C. human resources ministry placed a 17-year-old girl in a Delta hotel and left her unsupervised for eight days before police arrested her after complaints she was drinking.

Bill Vogel, now a member of Surrey's Community Resources Society, wants the government to investigate why the girl was not placed in the society's emergency shelter which is designed to handle such cases and had empty beds at the time.

"I'M APPALLED that social workers would put an unsupervised teenager into a hotel room," Vogel said in an interview. "I think it's irresponsible and is contributing to juvenile delinquency.

"We know there was drinking going on. She could have been raped and strangled being left alone . . . ."

The society in this community southeast of Vancouver is locked in a bitter dispute with human resources over getting sufficient money to keep the shelter operating this year.

VOGEL SAID the episode proves why the shelter should exist. The society has given human resources until today to approve a $78,000 budget or its workers will be laid off and the shelter closed.

"The reason we are sticking to our guns and insisting they give us enough money to operate the shelter properly is that we can guarantee nothing like this could happen here," he said.

Walter Schneider, North Delta human resources district supervisor, said he would be disappointed if he found staff hadn't explored all the other resources where the girl could have been located before putting her in a hotel.

HE SAID HE would check reports that shelter beds were available, but argued there may not have been shelter when the staff first checked there.

Schneider said the girl was difficult to control and was going through the trauma of leaving her parents. He said she might have refused to go to the shelter in which case she couldn't just be left on the street.

The girl was placed in the hotel Feb. 14 and by Feb. 29 had spent $195 on food, including one bill for $23 for a meal for two before the police arrived.

ON THE DAY she was taken away, human resources had issued an order extending her stay another week.

After being taken to a police station, the girl, whose name was withheld, was placed in a foster home. The girl, who now has moved to Calgary, was not charged.

CLUES ACROSS

1. SOCKS not sacks. SOCKS, rather than sacks, have a definite mode of usage providing a basis for what "it's reasonable to expect."
4. LOCKET not locked. The clue's word "treasured" (rather than "valuable") suggests something of sentimental rather than intrinsic value, in which connection LOCKET is more apt than locked. Locker is not very apt.
7. RESTING not rusting. One thinks of "a new lease of life" as following a time of being supposedly finished, and lying unused, without any particular reference to rusting. Also, it is a usable or repairable car (hardly one that has been rusting for decades) that "may receive a new lease of life."
10. SETTEE not setter. A setter takes its value from its pedigree, etc., rather than from its handsomeness. One doesn't usually buy an adult dog, anyway.
13. DANK not dark. DANK and (also) gloomy, yes; but "dark" alone is so similar to gloomy, it's pointless to say "dark and gloomy."
16. GET not set. With reference to a journey, "set out" is a self-contained phrase. The clue's wording: "—out on the road" has more the air of being to accommodate "GET."
18. RAVEN not haven. "Haven" has a somewhat poetic ring but is vague. In practical terms, one would speak of photographing a port or harbor, say. RAVEN is all the more apt for being a difficult subject.
21. RECENT not decent. RECENT is the more pointed answer. From a star, all records are at least decent anyway.
22. NICE not nine. "NICE points," requiring fine discrimination, etc., are hard to put over in a few words. In this context, "nine" is unsuitably specific. Why imagine that a speaker may have nine points he would make if he could?
23. SLY not shy or spy. The clue seems to regard this as a bad thing to be, so SLY is more apt than shy. The question of growing up to be a spy seems too odd or remote.

CLUES DOWN

1. STRUGGLING not straggling. "Even worse progress" implies that they are making bad progress anyway; this theme of difficulty links up better with STRUGGLING.
3. SLIP not skip. Since one is said simply to "skip town," the clue's phrase " out of town" suits SLIP better.
4. LEGS not logs. After all, the logs handled by lumbermen are very durable. The dangers which threaten the men's LEGS in such heavy work, however, are obvious.
5. COATS not costs. Undesirably heavy COATS can "seem" too burdensome, but heavy costs can be financially crippling in a real sense.
6. EXTENSIVE not expensive. Nobody relishes extended sessions in the dentist's chair, even though one may be wealthy enough for the expense not to matter.
11. NAVE not name. If a church is simply called "St. Mary's" or the like, its name will be the same as many another. One NAVE "may well resemble" that of many others, of course.
15. BRAINY not brawny. There is some point in remarking that a BRAINY, intellectual type may possibly not have all that much "common" sense, but there is no particular connection between brawn and sense.

Socreds accept NDP bid to view election methods

In a rare move Friday, the B.C. government benches accepted and endorsed an opposition amendment to standing committee structures to open up discussion on fair election practices.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) asked the house to consider the addition of fair election practices to the list of topics scheduled for discussion in committee this session to "enhance and greatly strengthen our democratic system."

Quoting a precedent set in 1968 by then-Speaker William Murray, the NDP house leader said "the last provincial election was so blatantly subjected to partisan manipulation that this Legislature must take corrective action."

Premier Bennett said he saw no objection to the amendment to the committee, and the proposal was approved unanimously.

Lack of competition blamed for food price spiral

WINNIPEG (CP) — Food prices increased faster than general prices in the period from 1971 to 1978 due primarily to lack of competitive pressures, says a report written for the Economic Council of Canada.

The report, prepared by University of Manitoba economist R.M.A. Loyns, says the over-all Consumer Price Index rose about 80 per cent in the eight-year period while its food component increased about 115 per cent.

Blame for the imbalance was placed on a trend towards increased supply management at the farm level and more regulation throughout the entire food chain.

The report, released Friday, says policies to increase competition and productivity could help stabilize prices.

It found no evidence of excessive profits by food companies in processing and retailing, although it says productivity is seriously lagging in the processing sector.

Food processing is the largest single manufacturing industry in Canada and inefficiencies in that system were partly to blame for higher food costs.

A comparison with the United States showed food costs had increased faster in Canada.

"Much of our worsening position in relation to the U.S. can be traced directly to the regulated commodities such as dairy and poultry," the report says.

"Those sectors where regulations have caused the greatest departure from competitive, market pricing have produced some of the largest price increases."

All four trapped miners dead

GRANDE CACHE, Alta. (CP) — All four miners trapped for more than a day in a coal mine cavein have died.

RCMP Sgt. Floyd McClennan told a news conference Friday afternoon that rescuers had reached the four miners and all were dead.

The men were trapped when the roof of a tunnel at the Rieff-Terrace mine, owned by McIntyre-Porcupine Mine Ltd., collapsed Thursday morning.

It took rescue crews more than 25 hours to reach the first body—identified as Alan Gill—and nearly two more hours to reach the remaining three miners.

Only Gill's name has been released.

One worker who was in the mine at the time of the accident said the roof collapsed because four-foot timbers that line the wall and support the roof were removed to allow a continuous miner machine to get further into the shaft.

The man, who wished to remain anonymous, said the cave-in occurred at the face of the shaft—the area where the actual mining of the coal was taking place—"a couple of thousand feet in from the opening."

"When it happened I was about 1,000 feet away . . . it was felt all through the mine and we knew it was a big cave-in as soon as it happened. We could feel a whoosh of air go by."

The man said about 75 feet of the shaft collapsed and he and other miners feel "99 per cent sure" the trapped men were crushed and killed immediately.

Stanfield presses increased contact

'Get to know the PLO'

OTTAWA (UPC) — Canada should increase its contact with the Palestinian Liberation Organization to encourage that group to take a more moderate stand with regard to recognition of Israel, ambassador-at-large Robert Stanfield said Friday.

In his final report on Canadian relations with the Middle East, Stanfield said a recent shift away from the PLO's hardline stance toward Israel was an encouraging development, but warned there were PLO factions openly rejecting moderation.

"Discussions with the PLO should in no way affect a firm stand by Canada against any terrorist activities perpetrated by armed sub-groups of that organization," Stanfield said, adding that terrorism should be condemned.

"Canada should urge the termination of these activities, pointing out that they do nothing to facilitate the return to Arab rule of Palestinian territory, which is the stated goal of such action," he said.

The PLO's terrorist activities have reinforced many Israelis' suspicions that the PLO is a body which cannot be trusted to respect a peace settlement with Israel, "and therefore cannot be an acceptable representative of the Palestinians in negotiations," the report said.

Stanfield said that while there was no requirement Canada recognize the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of Palestinians, the group headed by Yassar Arafat had been perceived by Arab nations to speak for approximately two million Palestinians now living in Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza areas.

Stanfield's two reports stemmed directly from Prime Minister Joe Clark's election promise last spring to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

More grain to Russia

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian wheat board Friday announced the sale of two million metric tonnes of grain to the Soviet Union.

The shipments will consist of high-grade spring wheat, durum wheat, and No. 1 utility oats and barley. The barley shipments will be made later in the shipping season.

A wheat board spokesman said the sale to the Soviet grain trading corporation was in keeping with normal and traditional levels of grain trade between Canada and the U.S.S.R

With a current Canada-U.S.S.R. grain contract expiring in May, the new contract will provide for shipments for the balance of the present crop year and into the 1980-81 crop year.

The value of the grain deal was not announced.

Tighter controls for painkiller ruled out

CALGARY (CP) — Federal controls on a widely-used prescription painkiller will not be changed "at the moment" despite a United Nations recommendation for tighter controls, a health department official said.

Bert Liston, director-general of the health protection branch's drug program, said Thursday in a telephone interview from Ottawa that patients would be warned about the drug propoxyphene, sold under the tradenames Darvon and

"It has been decided to follow an educational route and not to tighten controls," Liston said.

Last year the National Association of Chief Coroners and Chief Medical Examiners said it was worried about deaths linked to the drug. It said an analysis of provincial government statistics shows there were 160 known deaths involving the drug in B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan and Ontario in 1978.

Faith alive next week

Victoria Presbytery of the United Church Festival of Faith at Cadboro Bay United and St. George's Anglican churches March 14 and 15 will feature a diverse range of personalities telling their story and sharing their faith.

Under the leadership of Bud Phillips, director of continuing education and associate professor of Christian ministry at the Vancouver School of Theology, a youth trio, a couple and a minister will share their faith.

Then those present, adults and mature young people, will break into small groups where individuals can share their journey and their faith with each other.

Phillips said he is excited about the groups' fresh, alive witnessing to their Christian life in the Lower Vancouver Island area.

Les and Pat Shumka

The "storytellers" will be the youth trio of Chris Benjamin, Doug Korgel and Sharon Moscrip; a married couple, Les and Pat Shumka, and the Rev. Ron Attwell.

The young people are actively involved in their three respective churches, Metropolitan, Cadboro Bay and Oak Bay United.

Atwell was a Methodist minister in South Africa for 15 years before coming to Canada in 1977, where he is minister at Shawnigan Lake and Mill Bay.

Song leaders will be William Vandruten and Mae Holmes, with accompaniment by David Adams guitar and Robb Clark, bass.

Events start at 7 p.m. Friday March 14 and conclude at 10 p.m. Saturday March 15.

Registration, $10, which includes meals, must be made by phoning 384-2438 by next Friday, or mailing a form available at area churches to The Registrar, 354 Moss, Victoria, V8W 4N1.

Island Baptists to gather

Baptists from Comox, Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Chemainus, and Greater Victoria will gather at 10 a.m. next Saturday at Elk Lake Baptist Church for the Vancouver Island Association of Baptists rally.

Other guests include Rev. Phil Collins, area minister for the Baptist Union churches of B.C., and Ray Slade, moderator of the B.C. Association.

After the morning session at Elk Lake church, the rally will move to Sylvan Acres Baptist Camp, Land's End Road, for lunch and the afternoon session.

Conducted by Leanne Payne of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, the seminar will be at St. Saviour's Church, Catherine and Henry, in Vic West.

It will consist of evening sessions at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and day sessions from 10 a.m. to noon on Friday and Saturday.

Perspectives

By Rev. John A. Davidson

The only petition in the Lord's Prayer that has a condition is the one about forgiveness, the "trespasses" petition which in the New English Bible is given in this way: "Forgive us the wrongs we have done, as we forgiven those who have wronged us." The point here is that we cannot experience God's forgiveness if we do not forgive others. And here we come up against all sorts of problems and ambiguities.

Suppose one of you does me a wrong, commits an offence against me, something pretty sinful. After my initial anger has abated, and after I have wallowed for a time in righteous indignation, I decide, because I am such a spiritually sensitive fellow, to forgive you.

Instead of behaving in a nasty manner toward you—I know, of course that you really deserve a bit of nastiness from me—I turn on the sweetness and genial charm for you. This makes me feel very virtuous—even though in the back of my mind I may be thinking that by my forgiveness gesture I am now getting you just where I want you.

And if you have any commonsense at all, you'd rather have my open hostility than my sneaky, condescending forgiveness. We may say that we forget and forgive, but we often don't like the other person to forget that our forgetting and forgiving is very generous and strictly voluntary—and done only because of our deep graciousness.

Forgiveness evaporates almost immediately when it is offered with the object of manipulating the person to whom it is offered. In T. S. Eliot's play, The Cocktail Party, one character says of another, "She might decide to be forgiving and gain an advantage." Genuine forgiveness is offered only for the mending of broken relations among persons.

It is difficult to offer forgiveness—but it is often even more difficult to accept forgiveness. I am inclined to think that bad relations among persons come more from refusals to accept forgiveness than from refusals to offer forgiveness.

Forgiveness, of course, does not change the past. But it can change our ways of looking at the past—and that can make the future different from what it would be otherwise. Unwillingness to forgive others and to accept their forgiveness of us keep us from mending our strained and broken relations with them, and keep us from that fulfilment which flourishes only in good relations with one another.

"Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." When we use that petition in prayer we are asking God to accept us as we are, and acknowledging that he accepts us only as we accept others as they are: our relations with God and our relations with other persons are tied together and are dependent on one another.

It is never easy to confess your sin to God and to accept his forgiveness. It is never easy to forgive a person who has wronged you. It is never easy to accept the forgiveness of a person you have wronged.

Only through offering and accepting forgiveness can you mend your broken relations with others and come to fullness of personhood. Paul Tillich, one of the more influential religious thinkers of our time, expressed the force of forgiveness in this way: "We can love only because we forgive and are forgiven."

Jews celebrate historic deliverance

Gala at synagogue

By RABBI HARVEY MARKOWITZ

Purim, one of the most joyous holidays on the Jewish calendar, is celebrated tonight and Sunday morning.

Purim is observed on the 14th day of the Hebrew month of Adar, one month before Passover.

It commemorates the saving of the Jewish communities living under the Persian rule of King Ahsherosh from an evil plan to exterminate them by his adviser Haman.

Events described in the Megilat Esther, or Scroll of Esther, seem to have taken place about 450 B.C.E.

The name Purim derives from the word PUR which means lots or lottery, the method used by Haman to select the date on which he intended to release his wicked hordes for a massacre of the Persian Jews.

The most important ritual feature in the observance of the holiday is to attend the Synagogue on Purim eve and morning and to listen to the reading of the Scroll of Esther.

The second requirement of the holiday of Purim is to "eat, drink and be merry." A festive family dinner is held on Purim day. This meal, called a "Seudah Purim," is a fulfilment of the directive in the Megallat Esther, that these days should be days of feasting.

The third and fourth observances are requirements that each person send portions or gifts to friends. The portions usually consist of gifts of food. This "sending out of portions" is called in Hebrew "Schlach Manot." It is customary for children to serve as messengers in delivering the the portions.

Each Jew is obligated to give charity to at least two poor people or to at least two worthy causes. Even a poor person who himself is a recipient of charity must give to others on Purim.

But perhaps the custom that has become most popular on Purim from one Jewish communtity to the next, is to hold parades, carnival-type celebrations and parties on Purim Eve including the wearing of costumes and similar merrymaking, especially by the children.

In keeping with this tradition, Congregation Emanuel will host a gala Megalla reading and Purim carnival at 6:30 tonight at the synagogue, 1461 Blanshard.

Freedom world prayer day theme

Responsible Freedom is the theme for the 1980 World Day of Prayer, celebrated on around the world Friday, March 7.

Christian women of Thailand prepared this year's order of service, emphasizing the importance of responsible freedom in relation to ourselves, our families and to society.

Particular stress is laid upon the Word of God as it has come through the prophets and through Jesus Christ, as each of these fields of responsibility is examined.

The main downtown service will be at 2 p.m. in St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra. Col. John Nelson of the Salvation Army, who has served in many areas of the world, including a considerable time in Hong Kong, will speak, and the Over-Sixties choir of the Salvation Army will lead the singing.

There will be a brief noon service in the rotunda of the Parliament buildings, with the Newcombe Singers in attendance and Marjorie May as speaker.

To make it easier for as many as possible to attend, services have been arranged in a number of district churches:

Belmont-Oak Bay

churches will meet at St. Mary's Anglican Church, 1701 Elgin. The speaker will be Dr. W. E. Tan of Lester Pearson College.

Churches of Gordon Head, Cadboro Bay and Cedar Hill areas will gather in St. Aidan's United Church, 1691 Broadmead; the Rev. Geo. Stegen, executive director of the drug and rehabilitation society, will speak.

Esquimalt residents gather in St. Paul's Anglican Church, 1379 Esquimalt; speaker will be Mrs. Gwynne Kelley. These three services will begin at 2 p.m.

The George-Wilkinson district including View Royal, will meet at St. Christopher's Anglican Church, Carey at Tillicum, with Sister Patricia Dickinson as speaker, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The three churches of Cordova Bay will hold their service at Cordova Bay United Church, 5166 Cordova Bay; speaker Jara Smith; 1:30 p.m.

Brentwood Bay: Five churches in this area will meet at Brentwood United Church, 7162 West Saanich, at 2 p.m. Mary Youson will speak.

Sooke churches meet in Knox Presbyterian Church on Church Road at 1:30 p.m. Speaker is Chrissie Hogg.

Colwood-Langford area meets at Colwood Pentecostal Church, 2250 Sooke, Ivy Coughlin in charge of the service. Time, 7 p.m.

A shortened form of the service will be conducted in nursing homes and senior citizens' residences in the areas listed.

MOTHERS
Are you prepared for the warning? Have you prepared your children for what is to follow? During the past 9 years, Mary, the mother of all mankind has been making this information available to the mothers of North America.
If there was not a dire need the blessed mother would not be teaching what others have failed to make known to you. Mary does not need your money but she does want your love, your respect, and your attention.

Saanich 'reneged' on pledge over lots

Saanich chief planner Gil Laurenson has contradicted a claim by Swan Lake area residents that lots sold by the municipality to a developer had been slated to become parkland.

The organizers of a protest against the recent sale say that Saanich went back on a promise to include three lots in the 60-acre Swan Lake-Christmas Hill Nature Park.

"The lots were obtained for the purpose of constructing a trunk sewer line. It was never intended to include the land in the nature centre," Laurenson said in an interview.

THE LOTS, on Lancaster Road, were sold to developer Donald Metcalf for single-family homes. The land is being considered for rezoning from A-1 agricultural to RS-2 residential.

The lots have never been included as part of the nature centre land inventory," Laurenson said.

Council will be presented with a 41-signature petition Monday opposing construction of seven homes and asking the property be returned to parkland in perpetuity.

SPOKESMAN Matthew Julian, 3877 Douglas, said he purchased his home on the understanding the properties behind his house would eventually become part of the nature reserve.

The centre property now comprises 60 acres and another dozen acres are under consideration for acquisition in the future.

Julian said there was a lack of information and public involvement in the decision-making process, and a disregard of public opinion.

"RESIDENTS are concerned the proposed development will destroy wildlife habitat and that extensive landfill necessary before development could occur will create many ecological problems," he said.

The lots were obtained in 1973 through a land exchange.

A public hearing on the rezoning is expected to be held in two months.

Couvelier cool to speech

Throne speeches rarely contain anything of substance and the one delivered Friday in the B.C. Legislature followed that tradition, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said in an interview.

Couvelier said he was pleased with a promised change in highway maintenance financing. "That's a plus. I'm pleased to see that kind of recognition."

Proposed changes in the Highways Act would enable larger communities to establish provincial highways.

This could mean the designation of Blanshard and Douglas as provincial highways with the province responsible for maintenance.

Couvelier said he would await with interest details of legislation which would give municipalities an opportunity to redevelop their downtown districts.

"We have been attempting to do this in our municipality," he said. "But if we can obtain government assistance, that's all well and good."

Introduction of a Holiday Shopping Act was also welcomed by the mayor.

The question of Sunday closing would be brought into the local jurisdiction, he said, "but I'm not looking forward to being the local politician who has to make the decision on a very difficult issue."

Crash opposite municipal hall

Saanich police didn't have far to go to attend a four-car collision Friday night in the 800-block Vernon opposite the municipal complex.

Two people received minor injuries in the accident, caused when a woman driver changed lanes on the one-way northbound carriageway.

Police are still investigating.

Documents say Ford admits to fatherhood

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — More documents released in the Steve Ford paternity case claim the youngest son of former president Gerald Ford has "acknowledged" his fatherhood of a baby boy born out of wedlock and that medical tests showed he could have been the father of the child.

IT WAS ALSO disclosed Friday that Orange County records indicate the infant, named Lawrence Chase Ford, was born at Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach on Jan. 16, not in December as earlier reported.

Lawyers representing Ford, 23, and Joy Malken said Thursday they reached a "complete and amicable" settlement of a suit filed by Ford on Valentine's Day "to establish the existence or non-existence" of his fatherhood and to make "appropriate arrangements" for visitation rights and child support payments.

MISS MALKEN FILED a counter-suit Feb. 27, saying Ford "acknowledged paternity of said child" and tests at the UCLA Medical Center proved positive. She asked the court to issue "appropriate orders" for child support and custody.

The suits originally were sealed, but the court file was made public Thursday. The documents, like statements issued by the lawyers and other spokesmen, did not disclose any information about terms of the settlement or the relationship between Ford and Miss Malken, except to say they were not married.

THE BRIEF statement issued jointly by lawyers for both parties said the settlement was reached with the child's interests "being the sole and prevailing interests served."

Ford last week said he "may be the father" of the child and if so, "I am prepared to assume full responsibility."

FORMER President Ford said through a spokesman that he and his wife, Betty,

Ford
. . . filed suit

were aware of the situation and would be happy to welcome the grandchild into their family "if fatherhood is determined by tests and the proper authorities."

Watch air, Canada warns U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian officials expressed concern Friday that U.S. plans to burn more coal might mean increased air pollution for Canada as well as the United States.

In consultations at the state department, the Canadians urged the United States to make the switch to burning more coal in an environmentally-sound manner.

And they reminded U.S. officials about President Carter's commitment, made at the Tokyo summit conference last June, to develop increased coal use without damaging the environment.

The consultations were arranged after reports reaching Ottawa warned that proposals for conversion to coal could result in significant increases in air pollution and add to the acid rain problem in both countries.

U.S. officials are working on plans to convert many oil-fired power plants to burning coal as a means of reaching Carter's goal of cutting reliance on expensive imported oil by 750,000 barrels a day by 1990.

But an Environmental Protection Agency memo obtained by reporters earlier in the month indicated that one energy department proposal for the conversion could mean adding 600,000 tons of sulphur dioxide to the air every year, exacerbating the acid rain that threatens to devastate Canadian lakes.

One Canadian official who attended the Friday meeting said the environmental impact of proposals now under consideration in various U.S. agencies ranged from real increases in air pollution to the possibility of containing emissions at the present level. None calls for any reduction, he said.

The Canadians, noting that the two countries are engaged in consultations which they hope will eventually lead to negotiation of an agreement to control acid rain, suggested the coal conversion might provide a good opportunity for the United States to actually reduce emissions through the use of sophisticated pollution control equipment.

U.S. officials "were skittish on that idea," the Canadian said. "They weren't sure it was saleable to Congress."

A statement issued after the meeting said both sides reiterated their determination to make progress toward a co-operative air quality agreement.

Canadian officials said in interviews, however, that if the United States goes ahead with a coal plan that lacks good environmental safeguards, this will become more difficult.

The Americans promised to convey the Canadian worries to Carter before the president makes his decision on coal conversion plans, a move that might come as early as next week.

They also agreed to keep Canada informed as details of the U.S. program are developed.

POLICE DELIVER THE POT

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (UPI) — The first court-approved marijuana smoker in Texas, lung cancer patient Dan Nash, Friday arranged for sheriff's deliveries of the drug to ease his nausea during chemotherapy.

Admittedly stretching a new Texas law, state District Judge Erwin Ernst Thursday ordered the sheriff to give Nash's physician as much marijuana as the doctor believes Nash needs.

Soviets exclude U.S. in energy talks call

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union said Friday its interests lay in guaranteeing oil supplies from the Persian Gulf and called for an energy conference of European nations, neatly excluding the United States.

The invitation came in the form of a Tass commentary by Nikolai Portugalov, who said the U.S. was trying to edge out its European allies from the Middle East oil market.

Referring to President Leonid Brezhnev's speech last week, Tass said, "The Soviet Union, far from seeking to force its way to the warm seas, is itself interested in the security of oil supply routes in the Persian Gulf area."

It accused Washington of turning the region into a "powder cellar" and said, "The United States makes no secret of the fact that internal changes in the oil producing countries unsuitable to the U.S.A. may be regarded by the latter as a pretext for military interference."

The article noted West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt referred to the Soviet Union as a potential buyer of Middle East oil. Schmidt, Tass said, also said Moscow should have equal access to those sources of petroleum.

More dolphins slaughtered

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese fisherman, ignoring the pleas of American environmentalists, Friday slaughtered an additional 100 dolphins and fed the carasses into meatgrinders for fertilizer.

The fishermen, describing dolphins as "sea bandits," said that killing them was the only way to stop them from eating the same fish—mostly yellowtail and squid—the fishermen on Iki Island in western Japan depend upon for their livelihood.

Fishermen in the area north of Nagasaki and 625 miles southwest of Tokyo killed 100 dolphins Thursday and the same number Friday, feeding the carcasses into meatgrinders.

Representatives of environmental groups and filmmakers researching dolphin habits, all of them Americans, charged they witnessed fishermen killing two to three times the number of dolphins they claimed.

"We saw the systematic slaughter of about 200 to 300 dolphins," said Susan Cate of Hilo, Hawaii, in a telephone interview from Iki Island.

One representative of the fishermen said there had been no outcry from Japanese against the killing of dolphins, just from foreigners.

The slaughter was protested Friday by a B.C.-based wildlife organization.

The International Wildlife Protection Association, based in Kamloops, sent a telegram to the Japanese government urging the introduction of legislation preventing the killing of dolphins, association spokesman Trudy Hopkins said.

"We are asking other animal rights organizations to support our position and we ask all Canadians to boycott Japanese goods for at least one week, but longer if they feel strongly about the issue," she said.

Provincial Court

Two Oak Bay teenagers were charged in Victoria provincial court Friday following the seizure of more than $10,000 in allegedly stolen property by Oak Bay police Thursday.

Nicholas John Evans, 18, of 1000 Foul Bay, and Pierre Jean Fauchon, 17, of 988 Victoria Ave., were jointly charged with three counts of theft over $200 and one count of possession of stolen property.

Both were also individually charged with one count each of theft over $200 and possession of stolen property.

Defence lawyer Kenneth Kjellander elected trial by judge without jury for Evans and asked that the question of fixing a preliminary hearing date be remanded until March 17.

Fauchon was not represented by legal counsel and was also remanded until the same date for election of his trial method.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court Colwood RCMP were called to the business premises at 10:30 p.m. and found the front window broken, apparently by a rock lying nearby.

Police conducted a search and found MacDonald about a half mile away, walking with two antique sideboards and a lamp shade.

After arresting him, officers took MacDonald back to the Colwood detachment and administered two breath tests, obtaining readings of .15 and .14. MacDonald told police he had been at the Westwind beer parlor earlier in the evening.

He had previous convictions for theft in Edmonton, breaking and entering in Edmonton and Surrey, possession of narcotics in Parksville, and false pretences in Victoria. His last conviction was Sept. 21, 1978 in Edmonton, when he was fined $150 for theft.

Ostler also placed MacDonald on a year's probation and ordered him to take any drug and alcohol counselling as directed.

A 22-YEAR-OLD man was given a nine-month jail term after pleading guilty to possession of a stolen vehicle.

Ross Edwin Barton, of no fixed address, was also given a six-month term for possession of a stolen television set, another six-month term for impersonation, and a one-month sentence for public mischief. However, Ostler made all sentences concurrent with each other.

Mulligan said Budget Rent-A-Car reported theft of a van Feb. 3, and Victoria police stopped Barton in the vehicle at Blanshard and Johnson about 10 that night. Barton then gave them a false name of Brian Patrick Stothard, and told officers the car had been stolen by someone else.

The television set was stolen Dec. 24 from the Royal Victorian Motel, 230 Gorge, and found at Old Rick's Pawn Shop, 555 Johnson, after police found a pawn ticket on Barton.

Barton had a lengthy criminal record dating back to March 5, 1974, which included two previous convictions for impersonation.

Ostler said he would recommend that at least part of Barton's sentence be served in a forestry camp setting.

FINED FOR drinking-driving offences were: John Gordon Osborne, 22, of 924 Kingsmill, $800; Conrad Gregory Lucas, 21, of 2049 Church Road, $400; Geoffrey Franklin Bentley Foy, 19, of 1438 Walnut, $400; and Brian William Potter, 37, of 1315 Esquimalt, $350.

Warehouse may replace Blanshard trailer court

The Inn City trailer court on Blanshard, one of the few sites available in the Victoria metropolitan area for vacation trailers, will be closed to permit development of a warehouse and office building, if Saanich council agrees to rezone the 4.6-acre site.

Recommending rezoning, municipal planner Gil Laurenson says in a report that the proposal appears to be the most appropriate use for the land, as it is an extension of existing commercial-industrial development to the south.

The trailer court, he says, provides a necessary service to the tourist industry in Victoria, but with completion of the Blanshard Street extension, the site is not well suited for this use and its location is not a good advertisement for the industry.

DANGEROUS DRIVING CHARGE COSTS $200

Ronald James Moore, 21, was fined $200 in Victoria county court Friday by Judge E.J.C. Stewart after pleading guilty to dangerous driving.

He was originally charged with criminal negligence in the operation of a motorcycle in a police chase Jan. 28, 1979 which reached speeds of 75 miles an hour in the Shelbourne Street area.

Stewart said Moore had been irresponsible with motor vehicles, referring to 10 speeding offences and one careless driving since 1976. Because Moore did not have a previous criminal record, Stewart said it was a case for a fine rather than jail.

City host to bridge tourney

A good deal of bridge is in the cards for Victoria when more than 2,000 bridge players gather here for the B.C. Regional Bridge Tournament, to be held April 8-13 at the Empress hotel.

The annual tournament alternates between Victoria (even years) and Vancouver and is sponsored by District 19 of the American Contract Bridge League. The district includes B.C., Alaska, Washington and part of Idaho.

About 400 local players from the Victoria unit of the district will take part in the event, and the 2,000 or so players from Canada and the U.S. coming here will hotly contest the red and gold points that can be won in the tournament.

Officiating will be handled by 20 tournament directors.

Room reservations should be made before March 24. Contact the Empress Hotel, 721 Government Street, Victoria, phone 384-8111.

Speech 'empty, just empty,' says NDP leader

Bell-Irving reads speech

- Denticare push
- Energy studies
- B.C. to assume railway's debt

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

Premier Bennett ended speculation on the introduction of denticare Friday with the throne speech announcement that it would definitely be in place within the next fiscal year.

It was one of the few bright lights in the speech read by Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving and quickly branded "empty" by Opposition leader David Barrett.

"This government seems to be stumbling any time it tries to put something together," Barrett said. "This speech is empty, just empty. There is no continuity in it and no philosophy."

Bennett dismissed the criticism with a shrug. He indicated that Barrett had obviously failed to see the main thrust of the throne speech in the direction of energy and job-creating programs.

One of the moves promised in the speech will be the establishment of a research team to bring Hat Creek coal on stream as a producer of gasoline.

Up to now, all research on the Hat Creek coal deposits has been conducted by the National Coal Board of the United Kingdom.

"That meant the research really belonged to them," Bennett said. "When the new research team is established we shall be doing our own research, and the findings will belong to us."

The National Coal Board has already produced high-octane gasoline from the Hat Creek deposits but at too high a cost to make major production commercially viable.

The speech reminded MLAs that proven reserves of natural gas in B.C. now total seven trillion cubic feet, equal to more than 20 years of consumption at present levels.

There were promises of further development in the field of hydroelectric power generation.

"Our province today only harnesses one-third of its potential hydroelectric power," the speech stated. "The remaining two-thirds, roughly equivalent in energy potential to the total amount of oil British Columbia imports, rushes unused into the Pacific Ocean. Full consideration will be given to salvaging this huge energy source, but in such a way that it will not deminish our abundant salmon fisheries."

Outside the buildings, a group of students from universities and community colleges protested the proposed Cheakeye-Dunsmuir power line destined to bring more electric power to Vancouver Island.

As always, the speech contained only the bare bones of promises. The details will be disclosed only when the budget is introduced on March 10 or when specific legislation is brought down.

That means that municipalities will have to wait to find out what the throne speech means when it states that Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm "will lay a program before you which will afford our municipalities an opportunity to redevelop their downtown districts so that they may revitalize commerce and provide new sources of community pride."

Asked if he could "flesh the program out," Bennett declined.

Municipalities will also have to wait to find out what benefits are scheduled to come their way by virtue of changes in highway maintenance financing.

At present, only communities with populations of 30,000 or less can classify through-roads as a provincial responsibility.

The throne speech promises changes in the Highways Act to enable larger communities to establish provincial highways.

In Victoria that could mean the designation of Douglas and Blanshard as provincial highways, with the provincial government responsible for maintenance.

The speech also promised a major revamping of highways throughout the province with special emphasis on the north bank of the Fraser River and Vancouver Island.

MAGGIE SAILING? NO, NO, NO

Premier Bennett's reaction Friday to suggestions that the Princess Marguerite will sail again this year were terse.

Is the government considering putting the Marguerite back on the run for one more summer?

Answer: "No."

Is there any possibility that she will sail again under government colors?

"The answer is no."

Earlier, Transportation and Highways Minister Alex Fraser said he knew nothing of any negotiations going on in Seattle to let the Marguerite sail one more summer without sewage holding tanks.

"The government's position has not changed," he said. "The Marguerite will not be sailing this summer. If there is anyone in Seattle suggesting that she might, they are not my people."

Moslems reject hostages-UN parley

By United Press International

Moslem militants Friday harshly rejected any meeting between their 50 American hostages and the UN fact-finding commission to Iran, directly contradicting earlier assurances they would meet by the ruling Revolutionary Council.

The rejection suddenly threw into doubt the five-member panel's mission to end the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

"The students don't allow the commission to come here," a spokesman for the militants said in an interview by telephone from London. "It's only for show. That's what (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini says."

But in New York, UN spokesman Rudolf Stadjduhar, meeting with reporters after the militants issued their rejection, insisted the meeting would take place "soon," but he refused to specify a specific time or date. Following usual policy, he would not comment on the militants' rejection.

He said the commission of inquiry "has been informed by the Iranian authorities Thursday night that it will meet with the hostages," who were in their 118th day of captivity in the U.S. embassy.

Stadjduhar also announced Venezuelan diplomat Andres Aguilar, the commission member who flew home on private business earlier this week, would return to Iran on Sunday.

Tehran Radio, monitored in London, reported earlier that the Revolutionary Council had received the approval of Moslem militants for the meeting.

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter was not dissatisfied with UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's handling of the Iran crisis.

Powell made the comment in response to questions before the National Association of Broadcasters.

One questioner referred to reports in the Washington Post that Waldheim made "missteps" and "miscalculations" in dealing with the Iranian government on the commission's goals.

"The thrust of the story does not in any way convey the feeling of this administration," Powell said.

Also, a state department spokesman said the United States "fully supports the commission's work and we feel it can go forward with its mandate."

Both American officials and Waldheim insist the panel's mission was to seek an end to the Iranian-U.S. crisis, which Waldheim said specifically was to investigate Iranian complaints as well as to resolve the hostage issue.

Inquiry flails A-G's power

Canadian Press

The attorney-general's ministry has too much influence over provincial courts, and judges do not have the stature and confidence to fend off interference, an inquiry into the conduct of deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel has found.

"The provincial court is at once the court most subject to influence by the attorney-general's ministry and the court most in need of independence from that ministry," Mr. Justice Peter Seaton said in his report tabled Friday in the Legislature.

The judge found Vogel's conduct "inappropriate" in telephoning Judge Phil Govan of the Richmond family court to discuss a matter

Sauve breaks ground

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau announced Friday he has nominated former communications minister Jeanne Sauve to be the first woman Speaker of the House of Commons.

In his first public appointment since winning a 146-member majority government, Trudeau said that he had the assurance from defeated Prime Minister Joe Clark that he would second the nomination, ensuring Sauve's election as first woman speaker of the 282-seat chamber.

Sauve, 57, will replace Liberal MP James Jerome, who was appointed associate Chief Justice of the Federal Court of Canada.

First elected in the 1972 general election, Sauve was named federal science and technology minister by Trudeau.

In 1974, she was named environment minister and assumed the communications portfolio the following year.

A former broadcaster and journalist, Sauve attended the University of Ottawa before studying economics in London and French civilization at the University of Paris.

River rafter thrashes for his life

Steve Ortloff, 18, struggles for his life in rolling water of swollen Alameda Creek, Calif., Friday. Dave Malott, 15, drowned and Steve's brother Guy, 15, was rescued when their two-man raft capsized. Guy Malott thrashed his way to safety and ran for help. Ortloff was listed in satisfactory condition. This dramatic photo was taken by John Ramos of Valley Times, Pleasanton.

Reds shown Afghan plan

LONDON (AP) — Britain has formally handed the Soviet Union an outline of its proposal for a neutral Afghanistan and a quick withdrawal of Russian troops from the Southwest Asian country, the British foreign office announced Friday.

Senior foreign office sources told reporters this followed "a number of signals" which the Russians have passed in recent days that they are genuinely interested in the British idea.

The plan was put forward by Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington at a meeting of the nine-country European common market foreign ministers in Rome on Feb. 19.

"The Soviet attitude is far from discouraging," one official said. "In fact, I would say we are rather encouraged by it."

But so far there has been no direct Soviet response, the sources noted.

U.S. Ambassador Kingman Brewster said Friday the Russians seemed to be making "conciliatory noises," but warned that "the real test is what they're willing to do, not what they're willing to say."

Interviewed by Independent Television News, Brewster said the United States was not "too encouraged" by the recent Soviet hints.

"I think it's hard to see anything done or said so far that would indicate that they would be willing to make an unambiguous total withdrawal of their troops from Afghanistan, which obviously is an absolutely essential part of any package," he noted.

Stressing that U.S. officials were "enormously supportive" of the British plan, Brewster cautioned that it must guarantee the Afghan people some say in what kind of government leads them.

British officials said they hope the Kremlin would make an official overture soon.

Sperm bank disclosure rekindles controversy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Disclosure of an exclusive sperm bank that offers the sperm of Nobel Prize winners to carefully selected women has rekindled the scientific and moral controversy sparked by genetic engineering movements before the Second World War.

Robert Graham, a 74-year-old retired Escondido businessman, said he established the sperm bank to produce exceptionally bright children.

But some scientists questioned on Friday were skeptical of Graham's methods.

"I think there are such serious probems in this kind of social manipulation that (there are) serious dangers involved," said Luigi Cavalli-Sforza, genetics professor at Stanford University. "Naive enthusiasm (in this area) has very often in the past caused some major tragedies."

He said that even the best humans carry some bad genes and legal problems are possible if an offspring of the program "turns out to be mentally deficient, which is entirely possible."

Graham said at least five Nobel laureates donated sperm.

Graham said there is no payment for donors nor charge to recipients.

Mediator urges amnesty for Chicago firefighters

CHICAGO (AP) — A three-point plan, including full amnesty for all firemen, was formally recommended Friday by a federal mediator in hopes of resolving the bitter 16-day-old strike by city firefighters.

Amnesty, a return to work by Sunday and a return to mediated bargaining were recommended by Edward McMahon, national office representative for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in Washington, D.C.

McMahon also urged city and the Chicago Fire Fighters Union officials to end the dispute.

He said federal mediators had spent much of the last four days talking with both parties and concluded: "We are now convinced that the negotiating process is hopelessly deadlocked and this strike may well continue indefinitely."

McMahon, however, also pointed out that officials for both sides disliked the plan.

If agreement was not reached on all issues after five days of bargaining, "we recommend that any remaining unresolved items be submitted to an arbitrator who is a member of the National Academy of Arbitrators," McMahon said.

Earlier Friday, the Illinois Supreme Court denied a request to free the union's leader from jail, while the city prepared to send disciplinary hearing notices to 280 strikers.

Charles Pounian, city personnel director, said the disciplinary notices would order the strikers to report for hearings before the personnel board beginning March 11. The strikers would be subject to suspension, demotion or dismissal, he said.

The city has already taken steps to fire five battalion chiefs. Hearings for them were scheduled for Friday but were continued and will be held within the next few weeks.

Pounian said strikers were being called in on a station-by-station basis as quickly as city attorneys can prepare charges against them.

The Supreme Court's ruling on the request to free union president Frank Muscare, jailed for defying a back-to-work order, came hours after about 500 firefighters demonstrating in front of the Conrad Hilton Hotel booed and jeered Senator Edward Kennedy as he arrived for a fund-raising breakfast attended by Mayor Jane Byrne.

On Thursday, firefighters who had walked out Feb. 14 to press demands for a written contract overwhelmingly rejected the city's offer of amnesty if they returned to work. Only one firefighter showed up by the deadline set by Fire Commissioner Richard Albrecht.

Muscare, president of the 4,350-member Chicago Firefighters Union, was sentenced on Feb. 21 to five months in Cook County Jail by Circuit Judge John Hechinger.

Four days earlier, Hechinger had imposed contempt-of-court fines totalling $40,000 a day on Muscare, the union and six other union leaders. Those fines have been ignored by the union and its leaders.

The state's high court gave no explanation in refusing to free Muscare. The request had been made Wednesday by Anthony Intini, Muscare's lawyer. Intini said he would appeal the decision.

Mrs. Byrne, who has refused to negotiate with the firefighters until they return to work, is a leading supporter of Democrat Kennedy in his presidential bid.

Logger 'poor' after mishap

A 36-year-old logger was in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital Friday night after being evacuated by air from a remote forestry camp 40 miles northwest of Tahsis.

Werner Kruscamp, an employee of Freill Lake Logging Co., a contractor for the Tahsis Company, was crushed in a logging accident of undetermined origin earlier Friday.

Kruscamp was flown first to Tahsis hospital, where his condition was stabilized, before being flown to Victoria by Island Airlines about 1:45 p.m.

A spokesman at Victoria General Hospital said late Friday that Kruscamp was undergoing emergency surgery for multiple injuries.

An employee of the logging company at Fair Harbor, contacted by radio-telephone, declined to give any details of the accident. "Why don't you ask him (Kruscamp)?" he said. "I'm not going to tell you."

The RCMP at Tahsis were not notified of the accident.

Influence hit

There is no evidence of sinister conduct or improper motive by anyone involved, Seaton said.

He was appointed July 5 after Govan complained in court that someone from the attorney-general's ministry had asked the chief judge to transfer him after he ruled the government did not have the constitutional power to enact the B.C. Family Relations Act.

"The suggestion was, and I draw the inference, a more complacent judge, compliant judge, would hear and make orders without entering upon this constitutional inquiry," Govan had said.

Vogel had then telephoned him and suggested he transfer himself elsewhere because his ruling was administratively inconvenient.

Seaton said Vogel had not selected his words carefully when presenting evidence to the inquiry and "it is unlikely that he would speak with greater precision on the telephone."

"Judge Govan might have drawn more from what was said than Mr. Vogel wished him to draw. I tend to view that that happened."

He said telephone calls of this nature were not appropriate.

"To use language, as I find he did, that caused the judge to be alarmed, was unfair to the judge and to the offices that the two of them occupied."

The justice said he found a number of communications between the court services division of the attorney-general's ministry and its prosecution division which were inappropriate, posing a threat to judicial independence.

The evolution of the provincial court as an independent court is not yet complete, Seaton said.

"It retains ties with the attorney-general's ministry that one might hope it will shed in the future."

He said there appears to be "little development of the independent court service that is essential to a truly independent court," and the attitude within the ministry is inconsistent with independence.

There must be a line drawn between judicial responsibilities and executive responsibilities, he added.

"Judges are not part of a government team. Their function is separate and distinct. Not infrequently they decide between government and individuals and they must not be associated with either.

"If a judge concludes as Judge Govan did that legislation is ultra vires, it is his duty to so declare regardless of the consequences to the ministry."

He said communications between judges and the ministry are unavoidable "but it must always be kept in mind that the judge has separate responsibilities."

The communications he termed inappropriate had not been made with evil intent but "even when made with the best of intentions such communications endanger the independence without which there cannot be justice."

Government officials and opposition critics were not available for comment.

Dental

One major government policy change "will be introduced to rationalize the financing of the B.C. Railway and put it on a basis that is consistent with the approach taken to the financing of provincial ferry services and the highway system."

The move, recommended by Auditor General Erma Morrison a year ago, means the government will assume the close to $700 million debt now held by the railway and regular subsidy to keep the railway in the black.

Barrett said the move was merely "a good bookkeeping move, but the people of B.C. still have to pay the bill."

There was a vague reference in the speech to the agriculture ministry expanding its mandate "to include a responsibility for the food industry."

Bennett declined to elaborate.

On the controversial matter of store openings on Sundays and holidays, the speech indicated that whatever decisions are made, will be made locally.

The speech states that Attorney-General Allan Williams will introduce a Holiday Shopping Act which "will place responsibility at the community level for determining restrictions in the operation of retail businesses on holidays."

The Colonist has learned that the new bill will give each municipality the right to decide its own shopping hours bylaws but that all statutory holidays and Sundays must be contained in any decisions they make.

In other words, the same rules will apply on all holidays and on every Sunday.

The throne speech also promised legislation to codify employment standards which include workers in the agricultural industry, to increase compensation for citizens injured in criminal actions, and an increase in benefits for chiropractic, naturopathic, physiotherapy and podiatric treatments.

On denticare, the speech was specific. "The dental care assistance program proposed by the minister of health last year, will be implemented later this fiscal year."

The reading of the speech followed the traditional opening ceremonies which saw the lieutenant-governor arrive to a 15-gun salute. This year's guard of honor, inspected by Bell-Irving, was from Royal Roads Military College.

But did you know he was also a great field lacrosse player.

Well he was. Ed Travers, head referee of the Pacific Northwest Field Lacrosse League, saw him play and says Brown is considered the greatest midfielder ever to play the game and was a three-time All-American at Syracuse University.

Travers let go with that startling bit of information last Sunday when he visited Victoria to referee a PNWL game between Victoria Seasprays and Vancouver.

It was a revelation but it's not surprising that Travers came up with it. He's a field lacrosse fanatic and is a driving force behind the growth of the sport in the Northwest.

The short bearded fellow looks more like a private school soccer coach but he is your typical U.S. official. He's vocal and colorful, a showman but at the same time an official that leaves little room for arguments.

Unfortunately Victoria fans, used to the quiet indecisive Canadians, only see his type on rare occasions. When the opportunity arises they're appreciative and they demonstrated that with more than one round of applause for Travers during Sunday's game. He was effective and in many ways provided more entertainment than the game as the Seasprays romped to a 28-7 win over a shabby Vancouver club.

THE SEASPRAYS are attempting to revive the sport in Victoria and they flew Travers in from Seattle to spice up Sunday's game and to provide some training for Canadian officials and some insight for the players.

The first thing he did was meet with the players and laydown the rules. One thing that was strictly verboten was swearing. Swear and you're gone from the game Travers told them. Boxla officials might do well to learn from that and start enforcing the same rule. Some games at Memorial Arena the language is bad enough to turn a Marine sargeant blue.

And during the game when Travers made a call he didn't sneak over to the scorekeeper and whisper it. He shouted it out and was heard clear up to the press box.

The fans appreciated it, the players appreciated it and the PA announcer appreciated it.

When Travers made a call you knew he meant it. Consequently he received no arguments from players. That's a far cry from the boxla game where complaining is routine.

Travers, a native of Brooklyn but now a resident of Seattle, is equally candid off the field and loves to talk about lacrosse.

He was impressed with the play of the Seasprays and says they are at least the equal of the two best teams in Washington — Oak Parlour of Seattle and Seattle Lacrosse Club.

"They (Seasprays) have good depth, high energy and are good with the sticks. They have the potential to dominate the league."

Travers says they need to work on the philosophies of the game. "They have to make proper use of the midfielders and the fast break."

★ ★ ★

MOST CANADIAN sports fans are well aware that field lacrosse is played in some U.S. universities but most would be surprised at to just what extent the game is played in the U.S.

"When I first started playing there were six high school teams in the Long Island area by the time I was officiating there were 25 high school teams and when I left there were 65."

The game is currently being played in 389 universities in 20 states.

Travers hopes to see the same type of thing happen in the Northwest and is working to make the PNWL a permanent and strong force with solid representation from Canada.

The potential is there and if the players and Canadian officials can learn to entertain like Travers the sport might gain a large enough following to stick.

NOTES FROM HERE AND THERE...Victoria Dolphins will play as an "A" team in the Big Four Junior Football League this season. The only Island representative in the six-team league appeared headed for relegation to a new "B" level when it lost out in preliminary voting earlier this month. But the Dolphins, North Shore Cougars, Surrey Rams and Renfrew Trojans voted together against Vancouver Meralomas and Richmond Raiders to maintain the league as it was last season...The Dolphins annual meeting is Mar. 12 at 7:30 p.m. in the Ingraham Hotel and anyone wishing to work with the team is welcome to attend...Victoria Budgets pitcher Mark Smith should stick to fastball. Courtenay, Nanaimo lead sweep by North

There were no survivors.

The two southern squads that squirmed unbeaten through the first day's play were packed off, nursing wounded pride, to the losers' bracket of the double-knockout tourney. The other two south schools can go home and plan next season's strategy.

Friday linescore at McKinnon Gym: North 4, South 0.

Georges Vanier Towhees of Courtenay, holding down the No. 2 berth from the north, earned their spot in tonight's final — not to mention a guaranteed junket to Vancouver for provincial championships March 15-18 — by slamming Belmont Braves (South No. 1) 73-59.

Nanaimo Islanders (North 1) fought off plucky Victoria High Totems 78-60 to make their way to the 9:30 p.m. final.

Islanders, third-ranked in the province, travel to the provincials for the fourth successive time.

In earlier games, Port Alberni Chieftains (North 4) banished defending Island champion Parkland Panthers (South 3) with a 72-58 victory.

Assured of an Island placing at the provincials, Courtenay coach Dave Vranjes was justifiably chipper after his disciplined team shut down Belmont.

Now he's worried about Nanaimo. Towhees haven't solved Islanders yet, losing all four times they've met this season.

"If we come up with the right defensive combinations, we can beat Nanaimo," Vranjes reasoned out loud. A realist, he added: "But we're going to have to do everything right"

Towhees, who went 9-3 in the North Island league, threw a mixture of defences at the Braves which tied Muzz Bryant's battlers in knots.

Courtenay played a determined, controlled game, constantly alternating between man-to-man and zone defences. The Towhees' relentless press was another deciding factor.

"We usually play good defence. That's how we win," Vranjes said. "We don't normally blow people away. If we tried to score 90 points a game, we would probably give up 75."

Brent Daniel, one of Vranjes' offensive specialists, scored a game-high 23 points. Bob Hoeppner added 16 and Ron Short 14 as only five Towhees made it onto the scoresheet.

Belmont's best was Rob Ekstrom with 16, despite running into foul trouble in the second half. Al Cole, who led the Victoria league in scoring, had his moments on defence but had little luck penetrating Towhees' inside defence.

Forced to rely on low-percentage outside shots, Cole was held to 12 points. He has only 21 in two games.

Marc Haas scored 14 for Belmont, which — like Vic High — still has a chance to snag the third and final Island berth to the B.C.'s.

Belmont meets Cowichan at 10 a.m. while Vic High plays Port Alberni at 11:45. The winners advance to another game, at 6 p.m., to determine third place.

Nanaimo, everybody's pre-tournament pick, had a difficult time early with Vic High. The clubs struggled for nearly four minutes before Nanaimo's star guard, Jim Jordbro, scored the first hoop.

Jordbro had 19 points for Nanaimo, which got 17 from Dan Steffes and 15 more from Kurt Kelly.

Howe welcomes new mate, fires 800th goal

Hockey veteran Gordie Howe, who will be 52 on March 31, did a couple of noteworthy things on Friday. First he helped welcome 41-year-old Bobby Hull to the dressing room of Hartford Whalers. Then he scored his 800th NHL regular-season goal as Whalers blanked St. Louis Blues 3-0. Hull, who hopes to see action within a week, skated with the club for the first time since being acquired earlier this week from Winnipeg.

Cougar netminders near record pace

By STAN COOPER

With 14 games remaining in league play, including tonight's outing with Lethbridge Broncos at Memorial Arena, Victoria Cougars are within reach of a Western Hockey League defensive record.

Goalkeepers Grant Fuhr and Kevin Eastman have all but clinched league honors, allowing 178 goals over the first 58 games for a 3.06 goals-against average. Cougars have also allowed one empty-net goal, pushing the average to 3.08.

And they're aiming to better the league record of 216 goals (for the present 72-game schedule) or 3.00 goals-a-game, a mark established by Carey Walker and Blaine Peterson of the 1976-77 New Westminster Bruins.

Fuhr, the sensational 17-year-old and a strong candidate for rookie-of-the-year honors, leads the league at 3.05 and has won 26 of 36 decisions while 19-year-old Eastman, 17-5, is second at 3.08.

"We're out to get both goalkeepers under three goals a game," coach Jack Shupe said Friday, "and they'll probably get seven starts each in the last 14 games. If they each average two goals a game for that time, Kevin will finish at 2.83 and Grant 2.88."

Shupe wouldn't say which goalkeeper would get the start for the 8:30 game tonight or Sunday's game in Seattle against the Breakers.

But calculators aside, Shupe says he has never had two goalkeepers play so well.

"We never had an outstanding goalkeeper during the seven seasons I was in Medicine Hat, although Peter Peeters (now with Philadelphia Flyers) played well in his last season. Don Caley (now a Phoenix dentist) was the best goalie I had in Weyburn."

While Eastman is eligible for the National Hockey League entry draft this summer, Cougars, barring trades, will have Fuhr for another season as the Spruce Grove product misses the NHL cutoff date by eight days.

Eighteen-year-old players are eligible to be drafted this summer but players must be 18 by the Sept. 15 opening of training camps. Fuhr celebrates his 18th birthday on Sept. 23.

"Eighteen is regarded as the age of consent, the age when a player legally can sign a professional contract," Shupe explained, "and the Sept. 15 date was set as no player can attend NHL training camp without being signed."

Cougars have had good success against the bewildering Broncos this season, scoring a 5-4 win here Oct. 20 and a 5-0 decision in Lethbridge Dec. 12. Broncos were 6-2 winners on home ice on Nov. 14.

The Alberta squad suffered its fourth straight loss under the guidance of new coach Vic Stasiuk when New Westminster Bruins rallied Friday for a 5-4 win. Randy Wickware scored the winner at 18:14 of the third period and also drew three assists.

In other games, Saskatoon Blades edged Billings Bighorns 5-4 in overtime and Regina Pats roared to a 7-2 win over the visiting Calgary Wranglers.

LETHBRIDGE (4) — Sandy Sullivan, Norm Flynn, Kim Bosch, Dave Barr. NEW WESTMINSTER (5) — Randy Wickware, Brad Yachimec, Anthony McMurchy, Rene Van Driel, Marc Chartier. Attendance: 1,430.

Potvin returning tonight

Olympian signs with Islanders

● Friday scores, summaries — P. 16

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Defenceman Ken Morrow, a member of the United States gold medal Olympic hockey team, has signed a multi-year contract with New York Islanders, practised with the club Friday and will play tonight against Detroit Red Wings.

"His progress is up to him," said Islanders' general manager Bill Torrey. "He understands that. I've seen him play against Central Hockey League teams and I know he can play at that level. Now (Islanders coach) Al Arbour and I want to see him at the NHL level."

Morrow, who played his college hockey at Bowling Green, was a fourth-round draft choice of the Islanders in 1976. He scored one goal and added two assists in the recent Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y.

The Islanders also said defenceman Denis Potvin is expected to return to the lineup tonight, but that left winger Clark Gillies will be sidelined for 10 days to two weeks.

Potvin has been out for 41 games after suffering torn ligaments in his thumb Nov. 30 against Edmonton. He underwent surgery for the injury Dec. 4.

Potvin, who also missed eight games at the start of the season because of a bruised chest bone, has played in just 13 of the Islanders' 62 games this season, scoring four goals and 17 assists.

Unbeaten Vikings reach win No. 19

SASKATOON — With one game remaining on the Canada West men's basketball schedule, University of Victoria Vikings are still unbeaten.

Saskatchewan Huskies, on the other hand, seek that elusive first win. Time is running short.

Vikings, already in possession of the regular-season title, improved their record to 19-0 by means of an 81-72 triumph over the luckless Huskies, 0-19.

Kelly Dukeshire had 19 and Billy Loos scored 17 points for Vikings, who led 53-33 at the break before letting down a bit in the second half.

Vikings turned the ball over 35 times, a total almost matched by Huskies. They made 33 turnovers.

From the field, Saskatchewan was good 42 per cent of the time and from the line 60 per cent.

The teams close out the season tonight.

The opening game of the Canada West women's basketball league championship series, originally scheduled for Friday night at McKinnon Gym, has been postponed until tonight.

Game One goes tonight at 7:45 p.m. The second contest of the best-of-three series is set for Sunday at 2 p.m. and a third game, if necessary, would be played Monday at 5 p.m.

Midget Bombers win twice

Nikki Bennett and Lora Patterson scored 10 points each as the Bombers routed Cordova Bay 37-9 at Mount Douglas School and Kathy Mueller scored 10 points as the Bombers earned a berth in the final of the four-team tournament with a 22-12 decision over Duncan.

Duncan plays Saanich at 1 p.m. today and the winner plays Victoria at 3 p.m. If another game is needed in the double-knockout affair it will be played after the B.C. junior men's playoff game which starts at 5 p.m.

Coghlan sharp

NEW YORK (AP) — Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan, abandoning his specialty, the mile, for the three-mile race, shattered the American all-comers indoor record Friday night with a clocking of 13 minutes, 2.8 seconds at the national track and field championships.

Coghlan, winner of 15 consecutive indoor mile or 1,500-metre races over a three-year span before losing his last two outings, reeled off the third fastest three-mile indoor clocking ever and the fastest over an 11-laps-to-the-mile track.

The previous all-comers mark was 13:03.0, set by Nick Rose of Britain in the Mason-Dixon Games at Louisville, Ky., in 1978.

Ball to manage Blackpool

LONDON (Reuter) — Midfielder Alan Ball, a member of the North American Soccer League champion Vancouver Whitecaps, has been named manager of Third Division Blackpool for the 1980-81 English League season.

Ball, now playing with Southampton, will return next month to rejoin the Whitecaps for the 1980 NASL season.

Bolton promotes Anderson

Another English League manager appointed Friday was Stan Anderson of Bolton. Anderson, a coach with Bolton under former manager Ian Graves, takes over the manager's position which has been vacant for the last month.

Pronovost leaves Hull — again

HULL, Que. (CP) — Marcel Pronovost has resigned as coach and general-manager of Hull Olympiques of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League for the second time, with indications he is headed back to the National Hockey League.

Although he gave no indication where he was going as he left the bench following a 7-3 Hull loss to Chicoutimi Sagueneens, reports from Detroit indicate he could be going there as a defensive specialist under Red Wings coach Bobby Kromm.

Pronovost was Hull coach for 1½ years before quitting under similar circumstances to become coach of Buffalo Sabres during the 1977-78 NHL season. Fired from Buffalo in December, 1978, he rejoined Hull Dec. 19 that year.

Ranger owner sells to partners

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Brad Corbett has agreed to sell his majority ownership in Texas Rangers to other stockholders, the American League baseball club announced Friday. Corbett's stock will be bought by oilman Eddie Chiles, publisher Amon Carter Jr. and lawyer Dee Kelly, all of Fort Worth.

The sale is subject to compliance with the terms of the limited partnership agreement and the approval of the American League and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Hometown to honor Bradshaw

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A Terry Bradshaw Day, honoring the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback who was twice named as the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl, will be held April 5 in Shreveport, his home town. Steelers team-mates Joe Greene, Franco Harris, Mel Blount, Lynn Swann, and Sidney Thornton have indicated they will be in town, along with Dan Rooney, president of the National Football League club.

Canadian shares sailing win

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (CP) — Skipper Thomas Blackroller of San Francisco and crew member Dave Shaw of Edmonton won the world Star yachting championships Friday despite breaking their mast and failing to finish the last race. Blackroller and Shaw had built a commanding lead in the other five race. Blackroller, 40, also won the title in 1974 in Spain.

Islanders collect golds at B.C. Winter Games

Rowan put together times of 19.65 and 19.66 seconds to edge Doug Knight, 24, of Prince George. Knight had runs of 19.24 and 20.53 seconds to finish .46 seconds behind Rowan.

Fears that Thursday's rain would continue, were unfounded. In the regular slalom races Thursday, competitors were drenched with rain and skied a fog-shrouded course.

But blue skies and sunshine greeted racers and spectators Friday on North Star Mountain, and the sun quickly burned away the morning fog that hung over this East Kootenay city below the mountain.

Rush Hislop, 19, of Cranbrook had more of a margin in winning the women's race. She finished in 41.52 seconds. Second was Ardith Watson, 19, also of Cranbrook, at 43.92 seconds.

The four-day Games continue today with a new contingent of athletes competing in 10 sports.

Saskatchewan, Ontario rinks reach semi-final

EDMONTON (CP) — Marj Mitchell of Regina and Christine Bodogh of St. Catharines won their way into the semi-final of the Canadian women's curling championship Friday with victories in the tie-breaking rounds.

Saskatchewan beat Joan Dexter of New Westminster 7-4 and Bodogh got by Barb Davis of Lethbridge 7-5 in games that determined which of the four teams would make it to today's semi-final, earning the right to meet Nova Scotia in the Lassie Championship this afternoon.

Saskatchewan, Ontario, British Columbia, and Alberta all finished behind Nova Scotia after the week-long round-robin section with 6-4 win-loss records. Nova Scotia won a bye into the title game by finishing atop the standings at 9-1.

Both Ontario and Saskatchewan pulled out early leads in the tie-breaking games but had to fight comeback attempts to clinch the victories.

Saskatchewan picked up three in the first end and two in the third to take a 5-1 lead over B.C. but Dexter scored one in the fourth and stole one in the fifth to begin closing the gap.

However, the B.C. rink, playing without third Lou Logan who broke her wrist in the final round-robin game Thursday, could not catch Saskatchewan and Mitchell ran Dexter out of rocks on the tenth end.

Ontario was up 7-1 on Alberta, including a steal in the third end before Davis, who played on Myrna McQuarrie's 1977 championship rink, began to narrow the gap. The Alberta rink's lost a gamble on a tough take out to count five in the fifth endwas forced to settle for one.

However, Davis got to 7-5 before running out of rocks in the final end.

B.C. used Edmonton curler Anne McGarvey as a sweeper while lead Lynne Axford and second Nance Turney threw the extra stones.

'They really curled well last night (Thursday) and made a lot of nice shots," said Dexter of the pair's performance without Logan. "Today they just seemed to be up a little tighter. They hogged quite a few front rocks when they had to have them."

"We'll try and keep them hitting and try to not let them play that junk game again," she said.

"I know its going to be a very tough game," said Bodogh. "She gets the second crack at us now and we've got a second crack at her."

Logan, W.Va., city clerk Violet Miller has been spending more time on the telephone lately, ever since the Logan Banner ran a classified ad with the number of City Hall. The ad said: "Vacant—spacious potholes on Water Street Bridge. Immediate occupancy. Inconvenient to shopping centre. Rent or Lease. Not suitable for pets." Mrs. Miller says she's received "one crank call after another" and she's not too pleased about it. Besides, the clerk said in a front-page story in the Banner, the bridge—and its potholes—didn't even belong to the city. They belonged to the state.

Epidemic on wane

Virus kills 600 in U.S.

ATLANTA (UPI) — An influenza virus that changed its antigenic character just enough to make it a deadly infection for older people has claimed an estimated 600 lives, the national Center for Disease Control said Friday.

The five-week epidemic of B-type influenza appears to be waning, however, the CDC said.

The agency reported a marked decrease in the number of pneumonia and influenza deaths reported from 117 U.S. cities, but said "this total remained above the epidemic threshold for the fifth consecutive week.

"These deaths were primarily in the 65 or older age group," the CDC said.

The 117 cities used in the CDC survey represents 70 million people, or one-third the population of the United States. Flu activity was reported in 41 states, with the most cases in the northeast, midwest and the Pacific coast.

In addition to the flu and pneumonia deaths, the CDC reported 196 deaths nationwide caused by Reye's Syndrome, a brain and liver illness affecting children and triggered by a virus infection such as influenza. Ohio listed 92 cases of Reye's Syndrome, Michigan 28 and Minnesota 16. Some states had less than 10 cases and others reported none.

Don Berreth, CDC information director, said the current epidemic of B-type influenza marks the first time in 18 years this variety of flu has caused excess pneumonia and influenza deaths. In 1962, an epidemic of B-flu took the lives of 17,000.

About 100 deaths per week were attributed to the flu epidemic for the first three weeks, beginning in late January and early February. The fourth week of the outbreak accounted for some 200 lives. For the week ended Feb. 23, another 100 deaths were repored to the CDC.

Index flashing U.S. warning recession near

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government index designed to forecast the future path of the economy flashed warnings Friday that a recession may begin soon.

The administration is continuing its anti-inflation policy review and a group of senators asked President Carter to meet with them to discuss ways of slicing federal spending to combat surging inflation.

And House Republican leader John Rhodes and five other Republican congressmen urged Carter to submit a balanced budget for fiscal 1981 within 10 days, saying House Republicans will support such a move.

THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT said its index of leading indicators fell 0.7 per cent in January. It was the fourth consecutive monthly drop, the first time that has happened since late 1974 and early 1975.

The index had declined 0.2 per cent in December, 1.9 percent in November and 1.1 per cent in October.

The traditional rule-of-thumb is that three straight monthly drops in the index are a clear signal of an impending recession.

The index stood at 135.1 last month, the lowest it has been since July, 1977.

The administration has officially forecast a "mild" recession during the first half of this year. But so far, the economy has held up and some forecasters say it is now possible that a downturn may be avoided.

The most likely, administration sources say, is a cutback in federal spending. Budget cuts have gathered considerable support on Capitol Hill in recent days.

WALL STREET HAS ALSO been astir with rumors that Carter may clamp selective credit controls on the economy in order to cool borrowing.

"They're considering the whole range of possibilities, except wage-price controls," said one administration source. "Mandatory wage-price controls are just simply not being considered, as far as I know."

Leaders of a group of 44 senators asked Carter for an urgent meeting to discuss federal spending cuts.

"IMMEDIATE ACTION IS NEEDED to indicate to the American people the federal government is willing to take tough steps necessary to slash federal spending and fight inflation," Senators William Roth, Deleware Republican, and Richard Stone, Florida Democrat, said in a letter to Carter.

On Wednesday, Roth, Stone and 42 other senators introduced legislation that would limit federal spending to 21 per cent of the gross national product. Roth said that would reduce Carter's 1981 budget request by between $25 billion and $30 billion.

Bulletin blunt: Tito still grave

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Doctors for President Josip Broz Tito on Friday issued their shortest, bluntest medical bulletin so far, giving no indication they had stopped the grave deterioration of the 87-year-old Yugoslav leader's health.

"Despite application of indispensable measures of intensive treatment, the general state of health of President Tito does not show signs of improvement," they said.

The latest of the short reports that Tito's doctors have issued throughout his seven weeks in hospital here was only one sentence long. It appeared designed to discourage any thought that the doctors had been able to bring about an easing in Tito's steadily declining medical condition.

Tito, who has led his country for 30 years, developed kidney and heart weakness in early February, after the Jan. 20 amputation of his left leg because of circulation blockage.

Within the last eight days, the doctors disclosed that he was being kept alive on an artificial kidney machine, had developed an unspecified bleeding problem and had contracted a pneumonia which they could not relieve.

Tito, the only leader most Yugoslavs ever have known, has been confined since Jan. 12 at the Ljubljana Clinical Centre.

Centre given grant

CUMBERLAND — A grant of $10,000 has been made to the Child Development Centre in Cumberland from the Vancouver Foundation.

The centre, operated by the Comox Valley Child Development Association (formerly cerebral palsy), is in the process of adding to the present building through the Comox Valley Lions.

Glenda Lake, administrator of the centre, said the money had been used to purchase speech and physiotherapy equipment, preschool furniture, toys and testing equipment, and to pay for specially-designed and locally-made equipment for the classrooms and therapy room.

Vancouver-based nuns protest against 'discrimination' in Cowichan valley

All work has come to a halt on group's Riverbottom Road property

Cowichan Region dilemma

Opinions are sharply divided on religious group's building

By DEREK RHIND
Colonist correspondent

DUNCAN — The age-old conflict between religious and political zeal has again surfaced, this time in the Cowichan Valley.

The conflict is between the Apostles of Infinite Love and the Cowichan Valley Region Board.

The Apostles of Infinite Love, a Quebec-based religious order located on about 45 acres at Riverbottom Road, came into conflict with the region when it disobeyed a CVRD stop-work order and continued construction of a monastery.

Conflict arose originally when the application for a building permit was turned down following a public hearing held in Sahtlam Fire Hall Feb. 6.

The clash between the order and the region intensified last week, when six placard-carrying nuns from the order's Vancouver-based convent picketed the Victoria Law Courts and Cowichan Valley Region Board's offices here, after CVRD had applied to the B.C. Supreme Court and received an injunction against the order.

Main bone of contention at the emotionally-charged public hearing on Feb. 6—at which seven opposing letters including six from absentee owners were read and 20 persons of the 40 present indicated their objections—was to the zoning being changed to institutional.

RIVERBOTTOM ROAD, a rural link about 10 miles long, has some 20 residences scattered along each side, some several miles apart.

The area on which the Apostles of Infinite Love intended to build the monastery to house between six to 10 monks is zoned agricultural but is not in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

The current agricultural zoning permits no more than three unrelated persons to live in the single dwelling allowed under this zoning.

Fears expressed at the public hearing by local residents ranged from possible future construction of a penitentiary, increased traffic, noise from bell-ringing, sewage disposal, large number of people on one piece of property and possible tax increases.

In addition to residential and farm property, a Bible camp and a dude ranch are also located on Riverbottom Road.

Currently there are six monks living at this location, headed by Father Remi, who speaks little English. Spokesman for the group is Brother Bishara.

CONSTRUCTION OF the monastery has ceased, following the court injunction. But Brother Bishara and Sister Hyacinth, representing the Vancouver-based nuns, stated that they would resume construction despite the injunction if ordered to do so by their Father-General in Montreal.

"We take our orders from God, through our Father-General, not from man."

Public opinion here varies widely. Some think the religious order is being discriminated against, while others are plagued by fears that a Jonestown, Guyana, or another Mooney cult could possibly spring up in this tranquil setting close to the Cowichan River.

STILL OTHERS, including several local political representatives such as regional director Dick Stephenson, Cowichan-Malahat MLA Barbara Wallace and Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, MP Jim Manly, adopt a different approach, hoping that an amicable solution can be found, one that will allow the monks to build their monastery without contravening CVRD bylaws.

MLA Wallace said she thought the religious order was being treated this way "because of the recent history of religious groups, the Mooneys and the Jones cults. Unfortunately, this is in people's minds at this time."

"We are supposed to live in a country that practises freedom of religion.

"AS FAR AS I'M concerned, I don't want to see any group suffer from religious discrimination."

MP Manly said he supported religious freedom and "I hope a way can be found for this order to have its monastery."

Regional director Stephenson, who sat as a member of the public hearing committee Feb. 6 on the zoning change application by the Apostles of Infinite Love, said:

"THE LAND USE is excellent. Unfortunately they (Apostles) are more cognizant of their Father-General than they are of regional district bylaws.

"If they had gone the suggested route and applied for another public hearing and conformed with planning, health departments and so on, and were prepared to abide by our building and planning bylaws, I'm sure they would've got approval."

Stephenson suggested the best method for the religious order to gain approval for the construction of its monastery was to get a provincial charter. Currently the order has only a federal charter.

"If they then abide by provincial and civil statutes, I don't think they would have any further trouble at all," Stephenson said.

Sister Hyacinth, who said she represents the order in court matters, said the order intends to take its case to trial.

Second chance for RCMP

CAMPBELL RIVER — RCMP here will get a second chance at getting an addition of two constables to the force.

Such a request made to council earlier this month was turned down in a tie vote. However, Mayor Tom Barnett has indicated he will return the topic for reconsideration.

At the Feb. 4 meeting, aldermen Joan Stephens, Ralph Walker and Barnett voted to hire the additional men but aldermen Dave Storrie, Bill White and Hugh Campbell voted against the proposal.

Ald. John Leard was absent and he had voted in favor of the idea when it was discussed in committee.

Barnett said because Leard was away, he felt it would be desirable to bring the matter up again. He added that Leard's vote might not necessarily swing the outcome to the affirmative, but it did mean the matter would be given a fair hearing.

Meanwhile, Campbell River Environmental Council has written to council protesting the condition of Nunns Creek.

Ruth Barnett, secretary of the group, said it was unfortunate that when Homewood Road and 16th Avenue were constructed, culverts rather than bridges were erected across the creek beds.

She said culverts degrade the fish habitat and those which cross 16th Avenue were inadequate.

The decision to turn 16th into a one-way street southbound means it will have to be rebuilt, according to Barnett, and she urged that the present undesirable situation be rectified because of the need to improve salmon habitat.

Also noted in the letter was the fact seven shopping carts were lying in the stream and Barnett suggested that businesses be made responsible for retrieving their property now polluting the municipality.

She said Nunns Creek, despite its degradation, is still a viable salmon stream in which a number of coho are reared.

Move ferry to Hatch Point, says Cowichan mayor

DUNCAN — The Mill Bay ferry terminal should be moved southward to Hatch Point just south of Cowichan Bay, according to North Cowichan Mayor Graham Bruce.

In a letter to Transport Minister Alex Fraser, Bruce suggested the ferry spanning the Saanich Inlet, from Mill Bay to Brentwood, be moved north to Hatch Point, connecting with the Swartz Bay terminal.

Bruce says such a move would make access to up-Island points much easier for travellers arriving from Tsawwassen or the Gulf Islands.

Support for North Cowichan's proposal is gaining momentum in the Cowichan Valley.

Duncan council at its recent meeting backed the proposal by resolution.

Ald. Martin Lukaitis, who is also chairman of the regional board, said: "This would have great advantages to the Cowichan Valley, both in business and tourism."

Lukaitis said the proposed location would shorten the time now taken from Mill Bay to Brentwood, plus additional time consumed by the drive to the Swartz Bay terminal.

"As it stands at the moment, you might as well drive all the way to Victoria and forget about the ferry," he said.

The proposal to change the ferry route is not new.

It has been suggested to the provincial government on previous occassions but has not received favorable consideration.

Cobble Hill businessman Bob Merrilees was the last person to advocate changing the ferry route. His suggested alternative was similar to the idea proposed by Mayor Bruce.

Scholarships examined

TV's influence discussed by school board

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist correspondent

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo-Ladysmith school board attacked the problems of television viewing for children, the workload of teacher-coaches and fairness in scholarship examinations at its regular meeting here this week.

Trustees agreed with fellow board member Margo Westrheim that television and school curriculums are in conflict and that the province should take action to solve the problem.

The board approved a resolution to be sent to the B.C. School Trustees Association convention in May asking for help on the television problem.

The resolution pointed out that a major concern is the lack of research being conducted to understand the ramifications of television viewing on the school system.

Another concern, Westrheim said, was the loss of verbal ability since television teaches and reinforces non-verbal responses.

The resolution urges the province to conduct a study on the nature of the TV curriculum and its relationship to the public schools curriculum, and the extent to shich the biases of the school system can balance the TV biases.

It also asks that the province investigate the consequences of letting TV education go unchallenged by the school system and make concrete suggestions for teachers to help them cope with the education problems of children raised in a TV environment.

A most important point, Westrheim added, was the request by the resolution to have proved or disproved recent studies in the United States that suggested it is the TV style itself rather than the content which is the serious challenge to education.

Trustee Bill Holdom called the resolution "the most rational statement on television" he had ever seen, commenting that it focused on how to cope with TV, rather than condemning it. The resolution passed unanimously.

Another resolution to be sent to the BCSTA raised more controversy.

The resolution, also proposed by Westrheim, supports the idea of an equal number of classroom hours for high school and elementary teachers.

For a school board that has been wrestling with the question of associated professional duties time, or release time for elementary teachers, the topic was a controversial one.

A majority of board mambers, however, passed the resolution, which asks that the province find a way to equalize the number of hours teachers at all levels spend in the classroom.

Trustee Marjorie Stewart pointed out that the resolution could as easily mean a reduction in preparation time for high school teachers as it could mean giving elementary teachers more preparation time.

Teachers who put in many extra hours of work will be the focus of the board's education committee as it studies a letter of complaint from parents of the Nanaimo District senior high school's award-winning Islanders basketball team.

The parents said that they believed the district should recognize the efforts of teacher-coaches such as NDSS's John Levering, who has devoted approximately 700 extra hours a year to his coaching duties, without pay and very little recognition, the parents said.

They asked that the board question the policy of expecting this kind of effort and expenditure from an employee "merely because it has been traditional for PE teachers to coach teams."

They said that they believe if the board does not take the first step now, such as time considerations and reimbursement, the district will lose a dedicated teacher and coach.

In other business, trustees decided they would join other districts in protesting regulations covering scholarship examinations for Grade 12 students.

The trustees were particularly unhappy with regulations which required students from small high schools to compete with larger schools, rather than against each other.

By a narrow vote, the board decided that in the case of the district scholarships in such specialized fields as industrial arts, the English exam should not be required.

Schools superintendent Bruce Hoadley pointed out that all district scholarship winners must pass grade 12 English, and trustees decided they agreed with Marjorie Stewart who said students who excell in one field should not be denied scholarships because they are weaker in English.

The logo contest, sponsored by the district's public relations committee, gave three top prizes to students from NDSS, selected from more than 100 entries.

Parksville

Colonist correspondent

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo Region Board is holding most matters pertaining to the French Creek area in abeyance, including a controversial rezoning of the Parksville flats.

Area G, French Creek, is without a representative on the regional board, as a result of a court judicial order that a new election be held for the area.

The election is scheduled for March 29.

This week, the region considered several zoning items pertaining to French Creek, and put off any decision on all but the most routine.

Among the rezoning applications that have been delayed is one from Aldergrove Enterprises for approximately 45 acres in the Parksville flats area to be rezoned from rural to residential.

The board received a letter from the Parksville Fish and Game Association opposing any action on the rezoning until after the election.

The association urged the board not to let the rezoning go to public hearing until after French Creek residents elect a director for the board.

Other rezoning issues for French Creek that have been put off include applications from Newton Markets (K&R) for rural to commercial; Thwaites, for property near Yambury Road from rural to residential, and Brown, for a marine sales and service business.

The board did approve a rezoning to allow subdivision of a split-zoned property on the Island Highway to go ahead to public hearing.

Directors also voted to allow regional staff to go ahead with technical work on the new French Creek zoning bylaw.

Speech 'empty, just empty,' says NDP leader

Bell-Irving reads speech

- Denticare push
- Energy studies
- B.C. to assume railway's debt

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

Premier Bennett ended speculation on the introduction of denticare Friday with the throne speech announcement that it would definitely be in place within the next fiscal year.

It was one of the few bright lights in the speech read by Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving and quickly branded "empty" by Opposition leader David Barrett.

"This government seems to be stumbling any time it tries to put something together," Barrett said. "This speech is empty, just empty. There is no continuity in it and no philosophy."

Bennett dismissed the criticism with a shrug. He indicated that Barrett had obviously failed to see the main thrust of the throne speech in the direction of energy and job-creating programs.

One of the moves promised in the speech will be the establishment of a research team to bring Hat Creek coal on stream as a producer of gasoline.

Up to now, all research on the Hat Creek coal deposits has been conducted by the National Coal Board of the United Kingdom.

"That meant the research really belonged to them," Bennett said. "When the new research team is established we shall be doing our own research, and the findings will belong to us."

The National Coal Board has already produced high-octane gasoline from the Hat Creek deposits but at too high a cost to make major production commercially viable.

The speech reminded MLAs that proven reserves of natural gas in B.C. now total seven trillion cubic feet, equal to more than 20 years of consumption at present levels.

There were promises of further development in the field of hydroelectric power generation.

"Our province today only harnesses one-third of its potential hydroelectric power," the speech stated. "The remaining two-thirds, roughly equivalent in energy potential to the total amount of oil British Columbia imports, rushes unused into the Pacific Ocean. Full consideration will be given to salvaging this huge energy source, but in such a way that it will not deminish our abundant salmon fisheries."

Outside the buildings, a group of students from universities and community colleges protested the proposed Cheakeye-Dunsmuir power line destined to bring more electric power to Vancouver Island.

As always, the speech contained only the bare bones of promises. The details will be disclosed only when the budget is introduced on March 10 or when specific legislation is brought down.

That means that municipalities will have to wait to find out what the throne speech means when it states that Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm "will lay a program before you which will afford our municipalities an opportunity to redevelop their downtown districts so that they may revitalize commerce and provide new sources of community pride."

Asked if he could "flesh the program out," Bennett declined.

Municipalities will also have to wait to find out what benefits are scheduled to come their way by virtue of changes in highway maintenance financing.

At present, only communities with populations of 30,000 or less can classify through-roads as a provincial responsibility.

The throne speech promises changes in the Highways Act to enable larger communities to establish provincial highways.

In Victoria that could mean the designation of Douglas and Blanshard as provincial highways, with the provincial government responsible for maintenance.

The speech also promised a major revamping of highways throughout the province with special emphasis on the north bank of the Fraser River and Vancouver Island.

MAGGIE SAILING? NO, NO, NO

Premier Bennett's reaction Friday to suggestions that the Princess Marguerite will sail again this year were terse.

Is the government considering putting the Marguerite back on the run for one more summer?

Answer: "No."

Is there any possibility that she will sail again under government colors?

"The answer is no."

Earlier, Transportation and Highways Minister Alex Fraser said he knew nothing of any negotiations going on in Seattle to let the Marguerite sail one more summer without sewage holding tanks.

"The government's position has not changed," he said. "The Marguerite will not be sailing this summer. If there is anyone in Seattle suggesting that she might, they are not my people."

Moslems reject hostages-UN parley

By United Press International

Moslem militants Friday harshly rejected any meeting between their 50 American hostages and the UN fact-finding commission to Iran, directly contradicting earlier assurances they would meet by the ruling Revolutionary Council.

The rejection suddenly threw into doubt the five-member panel's mission to end the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

"The students don't allow the commission to come here," a spokesman for the militants said in an interview by telephone from London. "It's only for show. That's what (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini says."

But in New York, UN spokesman Rudolf Stadjduhar, meeting with reporters after the militants issued their rejection, insisted the meeting would take place "soon," but he refused to specify a specific time or date. Following usual policy, he would not comment on the militants' rejection.

He said the commission of inquiry "has been informed by the Iranian authorities Thursday night that it will meet with the hostages," who were in their 118th day of captivity in the U.S. embassy.

Stadjduhar also announced Venezuelan diplomat Andres Aguilar, the commission member who flew home on private business earlier this week, would return to Iran on Sunday.

Tehran Radio, monitored in London, reported earlier that the Revolutionary Council had received the approval of Moslem militants for the meeting.

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter was not dissatisfied with UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's handling of the Iran crisis.

Powell made the comment in response to questions before the National Association of Broadcasters.

One questioner referred to reports in the Washington Post that Waldheim made "missteps" and "miscalculations" in dealing with the Iranian government on the commission's goals.

"The thrust of the story does not in any way convey the feeling of this administration," Powell said.

Also, a state department spokesman said the United States "fully supports the commission's work and we feel it can go forward with its mandate."

Both American officials and Waldheim insist the panel's mission was to seek an end to the Iranian-U.S. crisis, which Waldheim said specifically was to investigate Iranian complaints as well as to resolve the hostage issue.

Inquiry flays A-G's power

Canadian Press

The attorney-general's ministry has too much influence over provincial courts, and judges do not have the stature and confidence to fend off interference, an inquiry into the conduct of deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel has found.

"The provincial court is at once the court most subject to influence by the attorney-general's ministry and the court most in need of independence from that ministry," Mr. Justice Peter Seaton said in his report tabled Friday in the Legislature.

The judge found Vogel's conduct "inappropriate" in telephoning Judge Phil Govan of the Richmond family court to discuss a matter

Sauve breaks ground

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau announced Friday he has nominated former communications minister Jeanne Sauve to be the first woman Speaker of the House of Commons.

In his first public appointment since winning a 146-member majority government, Trudeau said that he had the assurance from defeated Prime Minister Joe Clark that he would second the nomination, ensuring Sauve's election as first woman speaker of the 282-seat chamber.

Sauve, 57, will replace Liberal MP James Jerome, who was appointed associate Chief Justice of the Federal Court of Canada.

First elected in the 1972 general election, Sauve was named federal science and technology minister by Trudeau.

In 1974, she was named environment minister and assumed the communications portfolio the following year.

A former broadcaster and journalist, Sauve attended the University of Ottawa before studying economics in London and French civilization at the University of Paris.

River rafter thrashes for his life

Eighteen-year-old Steve Ortloff struggles for his life in rolling water of swollen Alameda Creek, Calif., Friday. Dave Malott, 15, drowned and Steve's brother Guy, 15, was rescued when their two-man raft capsized. Steve Ortloff was listed in satisfactory condition in hospital after being rescued. Reds shown Afghan plan

LONDON (AP) — Britain has formally handed the Soviet Union an outline of its proposal for a neutral Afghanistan and a quick withdrawal of Russian troops from the southwest Asian country, the British foreign office announced Friday.

Senior foreign office sources told reporters this followed "a number of signals" which the Russians have passed in recent days that they are genuinely interested in the British idea.

The plan was put forward by Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington at a meeting of the nine-country European common market foreign ministers in Rome on Feb. 19.

"The Soviet attitude is far from discouraging," one official said. "In fact, I would say we are rather encouraged by it."

But so far there has been no direct Soviet response, the sources noted.

U.S. Ambassador Kingman Brewster said Friday the Russians seemed to be making "conciliatory noises," but warned that "the real test is what they're willing to do, not what they're willing to say."

Interviewed by Independent Television News, Brewster said the United States was not "too encouraged" by the recent Soviet hints.

"I think it's hard to see anything done or said so far that would indicate that they would be willing to make an unambiguous total withdrawal of their troops from Afghanistan, which obviously is an absolutely essential part of any package," he noted.

Stressing that U.S. officials were "enormously supportive" of the British plan, Brewster cautioned that it must guarantee the Afghan people some say in what kind of government leads them.

British officials said they hope the Kremlin would make an official overture soon.

Sperm bank disclosure rekindles controversy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Disclosure of an exclusive sperm bank that offers the sperm of Nobel Prize winners to carefully selected women has rekindled the scientific and moral controversy sparked by genetic engineering movements before the Second World War.

Robert Graham, a 74-year-old retired Escondido businessman, said he established the sperm bank to produce exceptionally bright children.

But some scientists questioned on Friday were skeptical of Graham's methods.

"I think there are such serious probems in this kind of social manipulation that (there are) serious dangers involved," said Luigi Cavalli-Sforza, genetics professor at Stanford University. "Naive enthusiasm (in this area) has very often in the past caused some major tragedies."

He said that even the best humans carry some bad genes and legal problems are possible if an offspring of the program "turns out to be mentally deficient, which is entirely possible."

Graham said at least five Nobel laureates donated sperm.

Graham said there is no payment for donors nor charge to recipients.

Smith team tops bridge play

Bridge team captain Ron Smith and players Paul Smith, Matt Smith, Mike Blades and Don Amstutz emerged victorious from a three-team, knockout competition held last Sunday to decide the Victoria representative in the Canadian team zone finals.

The zone finals for bridge will be held in Vancouver in March.

Local playoffs to determine Victoria's entry started last September, with 12 teams contesting the right to represent the city in the finals. The three surviving teams met in the showdown Sunday.

McAvoy's team then met the Smith team in an afternoon session consisting of 32 hands. After trailing by three points at the half, Smith's team rallied to win by 11 points and earned the berth in the zone finals.

In last Friday's Victoria Dogwood Bridge Club games, Ernie Tradewell and Barry Turnham were first, Paul and Della Smith second, Francis Sparks and Doris Lovric third, Wyn Ramsell and Mary Arneson fourth, Tom and Vivian Pelton fifth, Mac Campbell and Doug Hawkes sixth and Dorothy Woodman and Dora Duprau seventh.

Last Sunday, Dot MacDonald and Jean MacLeod were first, Anne Pyka and Rick Denman second, Pat Tasker-Brown and Irene Brown third, Jane Meredith and Isobel Mckenzie tied for fourth with Clark Gilmour and Andra Thompson, who were visiting from Kelowna, and Tom and Vivian Pelton sixth.

Wednesday results for North-South pairs were Betty Lorimer and Jim McAvoy first, Harry and Gwen Brawn second, Denise McColl and Doris D'Amico third, Gord Hoare and Bette Barnard fourth, Bobby Dyson and Vi Lewis fifth and Sally Hemeon and Mike Champion sixth.

East-West pairs results were Eleanor and Harold Gropp first, Vera Fraser and Helen Birnie second, Harry Carter and Norm Goodwin third, Isobel McKenzie and Jane Meredith fourth, Bill Mais and Terry MacKenzie fifth and Naomi McCambley and Muriel Smith sixth.

Danny in magic kingdom

Danny Kaye, long absent from television, returns March 6 to star in The 25th Anniversary of Disneyland, an hour-long special in which Danny will play 15 different characters.

It figures.

Danny's quarter-century affiliation as special ambassador to the United Nations' UNICEF program has confirmed his image as a unique Pied Piper of little folk throughout the world.

Kaye's capering, prancing brand of humor combined with his pixie's face and mop of blond hair have given the comedian a Peter Pan quality, a seeming fix on the fountain of youth.

One year he visited 65 cities in the U.S. and Canada in five days, speaking at each stop.

"Now I'm ready to buckle down and take a more active part in show business, including TV."

Danny said the CBS special will not be another tour of the various rides and other attractions in Disneyland although the entire show was filmed in the Magic Kingdom.

"Viewers will get a feel of the park and what it is all about," he said. "We start in an empty field that was once an orange grove from which Walt Disney built this wonderful place.

Midband

Tacoma television station KCPQ will be off the air from signoff Friday, Feb. 29, until a new TV operation appears on the channel next September.

KCPQ-TV has been seen in this area on Channel H (20) in victoria Cablevision's Augmented Channels Service, which is seen by converter or other type of tuner expander.

The station has been seen on the ACS system since late 1976. It was opened more than five years ago by a Tacoma school district, which spent about $400,000 to take over the licence of the old Seattle-Tacoma channel 13 after it went broke.

KCPQ became an affiliate of the PBS network but the licence officially remained commercial. A leading U.S. independent TV company, Kelly Broadcasting of Scramento, offered a reported $35,000,000 for the licence and the sale was recently approved despite a year-long campaign to keep public TV in Tacoma.

The change means Channel 9 in Seattle is the only station in this area broadcasting a PBS schedule. The new owners of KCPQ now are buying programs and plan to return to the air in September with syndicated shows, movies, news and their own public affairs programs.

HOMES TODAY

209 ST. CHARLES (top photo)

This house was built in 1913. It had an orchard around it, and a verandah across the front. In subsequent years, the verandah disappeared, and a garage was built on.

Later still, the garage became a TV/recreation room, (accomplished, incidentally, with beams and planking from the old Bapco Paint factory which stood where Laurel Point condominiums are today).

Present owners think the painting on the old garage doors was done about ten years ago. According to Peter Macnair, anthropologist at the Provincial Museum, it is an adaptation of a Kwakiutl whale, the design having been elongated to fit the space. The whale's head is in the centre, with a pectoral fin on either side, the fluked tail at centre top. Typical of native art, though the killer whale has only one dorsal fin, two were shown in order to produce a bi-laterally symmetrical design.

Bob and Barbara Brown have owned the house for three years, don't know who did the painting, but they enjoy the original touch its color brings to what would otherwise seem, from the outside, like a very ordinary house.

It's a sun porch to dine in; it's a shield from chilly off-shore breezes; it's an impressive entry; inviting by day when its tall glass windows reflect trees and sky, welcoming by night when lights shine through the gold colored glass along the sides and top.

It's a glass lobby as tall as the house itself put onto the 30-year old house a few years ago by a local contractor/builder who acquired the glass from a store which was being pulled down.

Victoria and Terry Gains, who own the house presently, say that people often stop to take a better look as they drive by, drawn by that individual touch that gives their home such personality.

INTERIOR DESIGN

A fireplace that only looks off-centre

By PAULINE GRAVES

Although in the winter, or in cold weather at any season, a cheery blaze in the fireplace lifts the spirits, during warm weather the black hole of the fireplace opening adds nothing attractive to the room.

Plants can be placed to hide the soot or decorative screens can be used, but a better idea is to have a fireplace that looks good whatever the season.

Such a fireplace is shown here, in a home by architect Barry Berkus and interior designer Carole Eichen. The fireplace appears to be almost in the room's corner, but actually it is just off-center. Red brick and wood frame the fireplace and continue to the adjacent wall, and because they cover just this wall segment, they create the ilusion that the fireplace location is at the side.

Two courses of the 11-inch long brick comprise the mantel, the lower course installed on a steel plate set back 3½ inches from the front edge of the upper course.

Below, the hearth uses the same brick, the outer edge perpendicular to the wall, and the inner three set parallel, for a total depth of 22 inches, and the height is 11 inches.

Painting a cement drive and re-grouting tiles

Q. We have, I believe, successfully filled some cracks in our concrete driveway with cement and glue. Now we would like to paint it. Can you tell us about doing it ? First, be sure the surface is thoroughly cleaned. Wash away oil and grease. Remove dirt and other materials with a wire brush.

If there is a white salt-like material adhering to concrete, it is probably efflorescence, caused by moisture which dissolves salts in the interior of alkaline materials and carries them to the surface. Efflorescence must be removed before painting. Do not wet the surface or more crystals may appear.

Solvent-thinned, rubber-based paints are ideal for painting concrete surfaces exposed to weather, including swimming pools. They provide excellent resistance to alkali and water penetration and resist abrasion.

After an alkali-resistant primer has been applied, a finish coat should be used to resist exposure. Two finish coats are more satisfactory than a one-coat finish.

For best results, always choose a quality paint and use a special masonry brush or roller. As for spraying, I would check with the dealer to make sure whether the paint you buy is suitable for spraying. I would prefer the roller application myself.

Q. We have Spanish tile in our entry as well as on our double-sided fireplace hearths. It has wide (one-and-one-fourth inches) gray grout joints and I hate it.

Is there any way the grout can be stained to blend more harmoniously with the reddish warmth of the tile? Or could we tile over the existing tile on the hearths with a ceramic-type of Spanish tile? A. I know of no way of staining the grout to a satisfactory matching blend.

However, you could rake out the grout between the tile to a depth of about one-half inch. Then brush out all the loose particles and wet the surfaces with clear water. Then fill the joints with a fairly stiff, but workable mixture of ready-mixed patching grout.

If color is to be added, use only limeproof cement color sold by dealers in masonry materials. To determine amount of color needed for your particular purpose, make a few small trial batches before mixing the full batch.

By ANNE SWANNELL

Ray and Rosemary Wilson wanted a house oriented towards the sun and which would at the same time afford them privacy and roominess.

They bought a lot in the University district on a street which runs north-east-southwest, got busy with a pencil and ended up with floor plans for a 2,400 square foot home. They took their ideas to W. F. Lindsay Gardiner, a Victoria designer, who did the working drawings and designed the exterior facade.

The most important consideration when Ray and Rosemary Wilson planned and laid out their house was that breakfast room and dining room have sunny exposures, with privacy from the street, and from surrounding homes, so that a quiet breakfast-a-deux or a large dinner party would be undisturbed, and undisturbing.

As well as privacy from the outside world, Ray and Rosemary wanted privacy for each other, and designed the house so that they both could have it. "Both Ray and I grew up in big older homes with large rooms" says Rosemary, "so we needed the house to feel spacious."

A utility room with access to the carport, a breakfast room with patio off, kitchen, formal dining room, and another patio are all in-line on the sunny side of the house. The fireplaces are on the chilliest north east wall.

There are four rooms upstairs, and two bathrooms, in addition to the powder room beside the front door. The master bedroom and Ray's den open onto the balcony/deck on the back of the house, and the guest bedroom and Rosemary's studio give onto the inset roof sundeck in the front.

The kitchen gives easy access to both informal breakfast room and large formal dining room. The utility room, between breakfast room and carport is, with its abundant counter-space, as ideal for unloading groceries as it is for folding laundry.

Though the Wilsons' taste in furniture and decor is elegant and traditional, this is a house that reflects an unconventional and inventive approach to planning the use of space. For instance, the space under the stairs to the second floor, which most people use as a cupboard, is where [illegible] their stereo cabinet and all their records.

Windows throughout the house are curtained with sheers, which let in light and keep the privacy the Wilsons treasure.

Their favourite color is blue, and they have chosen a sophisticated shade of slate for carpeting throughout the entry, living, dining, stairway, upstairs hall and all but the master bedroom. This continuous flow of colour carries your eye through and therefor adds to the feeling of spaciousness.

In the living room, the blue's coolness is offset by touches of yellow, sunny green, and the golden glow of brass, and in fact, yellow tones are used to good effect throughout the house to complement the blue hues.

Another interesting feature of the house is the fact that there are no steps between outside and inside, so that you move from in to out with no impediment, no sense of separation.

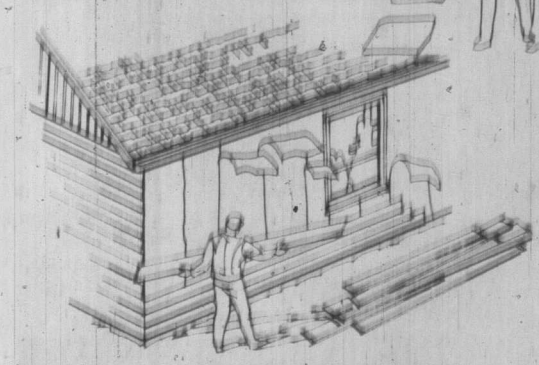
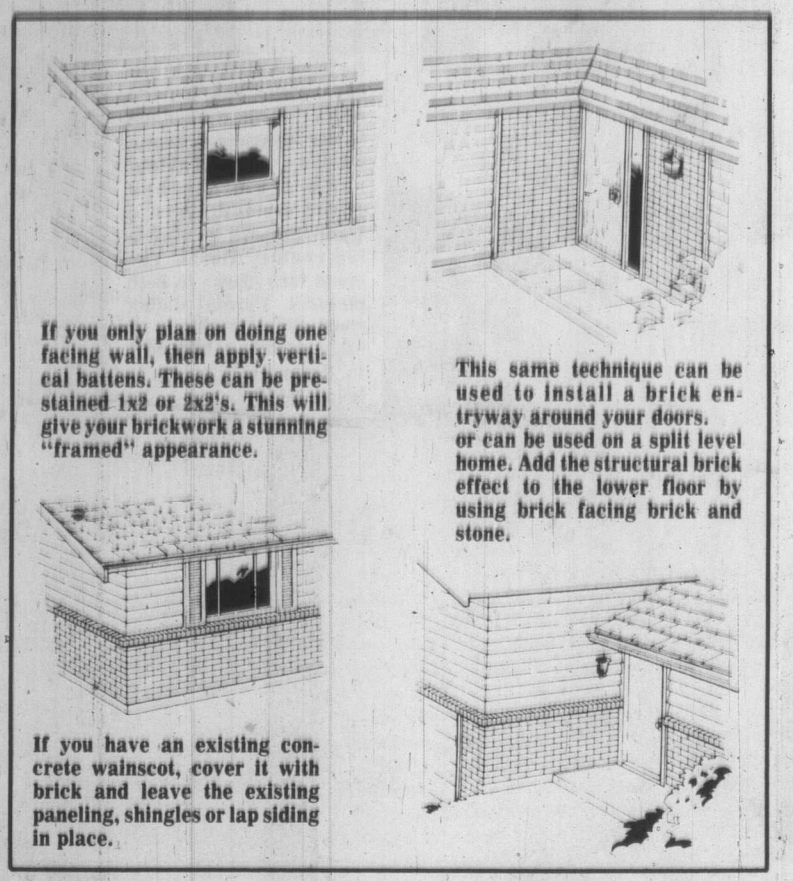
Information in this article was taken from a brochure called "Z-Brick Works Great Outdoors", which you can pick up at any Z-Brick display in local stores.

Now there is no reason to shy away from adding brick beauty to the exterior of your home. You don't need expensive structural ties or foundation enforcements, because you won't have the full weight of structural brick. You can do it all with facing brick or stone such as Z-Brick.

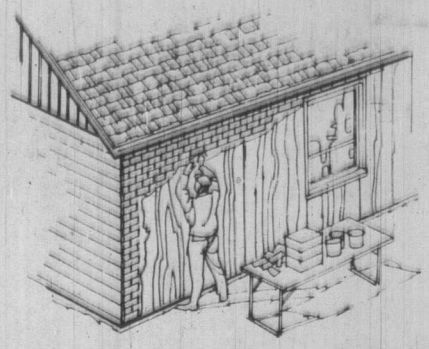


It's important to prepare the surface properly. The substrate must be sound prior to installing the facing.



If you only plan on doing one facing wall, then apply vertical battens. These can be prestained 1x2 or 2x2's. This will give your brickwork a stunning "framed" appearance.

This same technique can be used to install a brick entryway around your doors. or can be used on a split level home. Add the structural brick effect to the lower floor by using brick facing brick and stone.

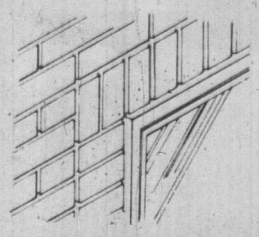


If you are covering a large expanse, you should incorporate a "story pole" to keep courses level. Take the facing brick out of ten to twenty boxes and mix them together. This will assure a totally random effect.. If you have access to a tile cutter, use it. It will save a considerable amount of time in cutting the bricks for details and corners.

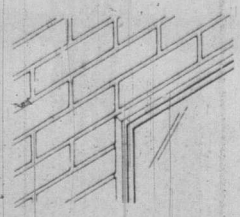
If you have an existing concrete wainscot, cover it with brick and leave the existing paneling, shingles or lap siding in place.

As with all facing applications, make sure that you have properly measured the area to be covered and have prepared the surface. On precast cement or concrete block, make sure that it is clean and free of dust and dirt. Surface should be "flat." If surface is covered with old lap siding or shingles, they must be removed first. Also make sure you remove all old building paper first.

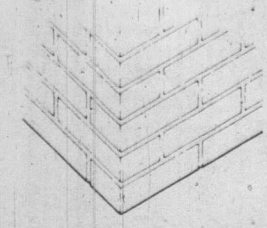
Use the step-by-step application procedure detailed in the back of this booklet. Start in the upper left hand corner and run a full row of bricks horizontally. Then alternate between full and half bricks down the vertical dimension of the walls. Then it's just a matter of filling in the rows. Use a level or "story pole" to correct for even rows.



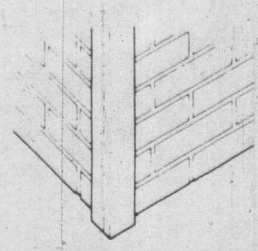
The detail around windows can be done by simply making vertical or horizontal cuts in the brick and continuing the same course alignment around the window area, by butting the brick flush to the existing frame.



Jazz up the window detail by using different courses. To do this, frame the vertical dimensions of the window with a stacked bond with full bricks. Do the horizontal detail with a soldier bond. This should be done first, allowing for the regular courses to lay into place.



Corners can be butted together with a straight cut or they can be mitered and filled. They are filled with a mixture of brick dust (3 parts) and Z-Sealer (1 part). Let them dry and rasp off the excess. The filled corner is for the meticulous craftsman.



You can cut down on a lot of detail work by using any exterior grade batten or corner piece. Install the battens first and then just run the brick course right up to them.

Book tells what homes reveal about people

Are you achievement oriented? Do you like change in your life? Do you follow tasks to completion? Have you an exhibitionistic streak? In her "Psycho-Decorating", M. H. Harmon says that the way people decorate their homes reveals a surprising amount of information about their attitudes and personality. We all have strong personal preferences in the surroundings we choose, she says and these likes and dislikes can tell us much about ourselves, and about others. The shape and size of the coffee table, whether the legs of most furniture are curved or straight, whether walls are patterned or plain, whether the couch is velvet or matelasse are all indications. Published in 1977 by Wyden Books.

YOU CAN MAKE IT!

Send for 'Decoupage Made Easy'

By STEVE ELLINGSON

One of the most common items in Canada is a printed piece of paper, usually about 8" x 10", which signifies that the holder is someone special. It takes various forms . . . certificates of recognition for services rendered . . . awards for achievement . . . etc. Usually these precious bits of paper wind up yellowing and forgotten in the darkest corners of dresser drawers. Framing can be expensive. What to do? Why decoupage them, of course and bring your honors to light! Decoupage and hang them all over you office or den. Impress your friends and confound your enemies!

Decoupage (pronounced day-koo-pahje) is an ancient art that's been making a big comeback. It basically involves pasting down your favorite subject matter on a wooden plaque and then coating with a glass-like finish. However, the variations are endless (decoupage on purses, china and jewelry boxes included in our instructions). We'll give you the basics on this method of 'framing' your prints. You can also learn how to achieve the distressed, antique look of the parchment Declaration pictures shown here. To obtain the "Decoupage Made Easy" Pattern No. 495, and $2.00 (please add fifty cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to:

Mr. John Hutchinson
Victoria Press
2621 Douglas Street
Victoria, B.C.

Dear Mr Hutchinson:

My display ad that appeared last weekend in "Homes Today" was a great success! The "Open House" ad brought at least sixty people through 4429 Torrington during the weekend, and resulted in two offers to purchase. I was able to sell the home as a direct result of the ad. The owners have been transferred and must be in Prince George by March 1st. Needless to say, they are happy with the outcome.

My advertising in your supplement has always brought excellent results. I will continue to use it because it is a real "plus" to have it delivered each weekend to every subscriber to the TIMES and the COLONIST in the Victoria area, not to mention the out of town readers who may be planning to relocate here.

Finally, your personalised service helps make my job a little easier! Many thanks again,

Sincerely,

Sharon Daily
